ROUTED SPOILSMEN.

Pendleton's Bill and Civil Service Reform.

Ben Butler's Message Editorially Considered --An Able Document--Nonsense Run Wild --Editorial Comments of To-Day's New York Press.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The Sun to-day calls it "nonsense run wild." It says:

"We read in the Boston Herald that Mr. Cleveland is being carefully groomed by his friends in New York for the presidential race in 1884. We suggest, while Mr. Cleveland's friends are engaged in doing their level best under the necessity of apologizing for the defects and crudities of his inaugural message, the prospect of his becoming the candidate for the Democrats for President in 1884 cannot be regarded as very brilliant. It is an interesting circumstance that Mr. Cleveland was made the leader of the New York Democracy last year by a Half-breed Republican newspaper in Buffalo, which had become disgusted and enraged with its own party and desired to do all the mischief it could. There was not a Democratic journal in the State which urged the nomination of Mr. Cleveland. No branch of the Democracy called for him. No intelligent Democrat was anxious to stake everything upon the fortunes of an untried and an unknown man. But circumstances favored the Half-breed speculation, and Mr. Cleveland became Governor of New York. The Democratic candidate for President two years hence will not be selected by Half-breed influence, nor will his nomination be based upon the ignorance of the people respecting him."

THE WHISKY BILL.

This morning's Times says of the whisky bill: "While it is perfectly true that, if people will drink whisky, it is better that they should drink it five years old than when newly manufactured, it is not at all clear that people of the United States who do not drink whisky should be taxed to pay for improving the quality of the liquor of those who do. The distillers who have gone into an overproduction equal to six years' demand did so with their eyes open. The presumption is that they had some exceptional temptation in the way of cheap raw material or of very large prospective profits to urge them to take the risk. It is all very well to pay interest at the rate of five per cent on the extended tax of ninety cents on the gallon, but it would be interesting to know the precise relation between the shrinkage in bulk and appreciation in value of the five-year-old spirits. The importer who pays $2 a gallon on the product of foreign distillers is not permitted to mature his brandy, whisky or gin at the public expense."

BUTLER'S MESSAGE.

To-day's Journal says: "Gen. Butler's message to the Massachusetts Legislature makes a bulky volume of 121 pages, which he has kindly sent to us. Our own legislators might profit by a perusal of some portions of the address. Gov. Butler insists that the duly qualified elector cannot be justly deprived of the right of registration down to the very hour of opening the polls. When his vote is kept out of the ballot box a violation of the Constitution takes place. The Massachusetts law he regards as an unnecessary obstruction of the voter, and he recommends such amendments as will keep the voter once registered on the list, instead of putting citizens to the loss and trouble of repeated registrations when they have proved their qualifications and have not changed their residence. These suggestions might have appropriately come from our own Governor."

THE PENDLETON BILL.

The World, speaking of the passage of the Pendleton bill, says this morning: "It was one of the most extraordinary scenes ever witnessed in the Congress of the United States. The dogged and Parthian retreat of the spoilsmen and the hacks in the Senate chamber before the overwhelming advance of public opinion was far less remarkable than the panic-stricken flight of the spoilsmen and hacks in the House. Before the autumn elections the bill could not have been brought even to a vote in either body. The lesson of those elections as it is read by the members of both houses is that whatever is done or left undone, something, must be done to appease or pretend to appease the demand for a reform of the civil service. The friends of that reform must not be too sanguine in view of this victory, complete rout of the spoilsmen as it seems to be. The spoilsmen have not changed their nature nor suddenly unlearned the experience of their lives. Their whole idea of politics is involved with the spoils system, the attack upon which they yesterday joined. They simply do not conceive of a condition of things in which American politics can be carried on and parties managed and public opinion made effectual except through the machine, an integral part of which is the use of all public offices for the enforcement of a code of political rewards and punishments. It stands to reason that they cannot believe in a reform of the civil service. Their faith is that the system introduced by the bill will break down, and that things will go on pretty much as they went on before."

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The Star to-day say of the civil service reform bill: "The holiday recess had the effect of convincing members that the sentiment of the people on that subject is decided, and that they are not in a mood to be trifled with. They demand that the evils and abuses and dangers of the present system, which has been corrupt and pernicious under successive Republican administrations, shall be stopped. This Pendleton bill is not exactly what most Democrats in Congress and in the country would have. It has been seriously objected to by many strong and earnest supporters of the proposed reform as not going far enough in the direction of reform and as calculated to diminish rather than increase the efficiency of the service. Most of them, however, have yielded their objections in order to give the measure a fair trial. They have sacrificed partisan considerations to the public good. If the measure works well they will be more than satisfied and Senator Pendleton will have the credit he so richly deserves and has so fairly earned. Yet the passage of the bill is not due to Mr. Pendleton nor to the present Congress, but to the people who expressed their sentiments at the autumn elections in tones and terms Congress could not choose but hear, and did not dare to disobey.

GOVERNORS' MESSAGES.

The Tribune to-day, speaking of Butler's message, says: "Governors' messages are not usually classified under the title of popular literature, but the one which General Butler sent to the Massachusetts Legislature yesterday is an exception. It will be read from beginning to end by nearly the entire population of the State, and by thousands of people outside the State. No more readable public document has been issued anywhere for many years. In Massachusetts its perusal will excite conflicting emotions. That large class of citizens, mostly young, who voted for the General 'just to see how the old man could act as Governor,' will be delighted with it. It attacks the time-honored institutions of the old commonwealth with the reckless abandon of a Butler stump speech. Indeed, it is largely a stump speech of great ability, disguised under the dignified name of message. It is thoroughly Butlerish throughout, with all that the term implies. Yet it is a strong and able document. No man can read it without being convinced that its author had devoted much study to the questions he discusses, for upon all of them he shows a firm grasp and a knowledge both wide and exact. He is not always judicial and he magnifies minor points in order to make a striking presentation of his side of the case. On a few subjects he palpably plays the demagogue, but when all this is said it must be admitted that he tells a great deal of truth, which his immediate predecessors have lacked either the courage or inclination to utter."

LOST AT SEA.

The Star of the West Mysteriously Missing--Fifteen Men on Board.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The bark Star of the West, which left this port for Bremen on October 20, has not since been heard from, and Mr. J. Zittlosen, her owner, fears she has been lost with all on board. The vessel was formerly the steamship S. S. Cuyler, which was used as a gunboat during the war, and was afterward fitted out as a privateer for the Government of Peru during her trouble with Spain. The steamship Cuyler was built at this port in 1859 and was intended as an experiment. She had sharp bows and in many respects resembled a yacht. She was supplied with several new steam appliances, all of which were intended to be experimental. In 1861 she was purchased by the United States Government, at a cost of $165,000, and was armed with twelve guns. She was sent to watch blockade-runners along the coast of the Southern States. She cruised principally in the Gulf of Mexico, where she captured three schooners which were attempting to run the blockade. After the war she was sold to Richard Sturgess, and for a time plied between this port and New Orleans. In 1867, during the war the Cuyler was sold to a high official of the United States of Colombia. The Government of Colombia was nominally neutral. United States District Attorney Courtney libeled the vessel just as she was about to leave this port. Her owners gave bond to the amount of $20,000. The Cuyler was next heard of under the name of "El Rayo." She was then lying at anchor in one of the ports of Colombia. She was being watched by a Spanish and an American man-of-war, both of which suspected that she had been fitted up to prey upon Spanish commerce. President Mosquero, of the Colombian Government, was anxious to assist the Peruvians. His refusal to disarm the El Rayo was one of the causes of his overthrow. Later the vessel was made into a bark and named the Star of the West. When she left this port last October she was commanded by Capt. Jos. A. Fickett, who was accompanied by his wife. H. Thiessen, of this city, was mate, and A. Carerey was second officer. Under them were fifteen men, nearly all of whom were Germans and Norwegians.

BETWEEN PERU AND SPAIN

Taking the Veil.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—Six young novices of the Ursuline order, each carrying a crucifix in the right hand, a lighted taper in the left, moved in procession up the aisle of the chapel attached to the convent of the order at Morrisania. They knelt before the altar and Monsigneur Quinn, Vicar General, who was to receive their profession, addressed to them a number of questions bearing on their expressed desire to devote themselves entirely to religious work. He then preached a sermon upon the vocation which they had chosen. After the recitation of the litany of the Saints the six young women left the chapel for a few minutes. When they returned they wore black vails in place of white. They proceeded to pronounce their vows of chastity, poverty and obedience, and received in return from the hands of Mons. Quinn a ring and crown, signifying their union with Christ. According to custom the crown will be worn for two days, and the ring will remain on the hand during life, as a reminder to the wearer that she is the Lord's bride. After the singing of the "Regnum Mundi" by the sextet of sisters, who compose the convent choir, the ceremony was ended by the chanting of the "Te Deum" and the benediction of the sacrament. Many relatives and friends of the novices were present to witness the ceremony. Six is an unusually large number of novices to take final vows at once in the Ursuline, order which is an order of cloistered nuns. All of the six young women lived in this city. Their names in religion and in the world are Sister Rose, Carrie Crosby; Sister Angela, Maggie Williamson, Sister Depazzi, Sarah Sweeny; Sister Ignatius, Katie Lyons; Sister Augustine, Mary Condon, and Sister Sebastian, Nellie Finnegan. The first five are choir nuns, or teachers, and the sixth is a lay sister, or one who attends to the household duties.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

CHICAGO, January 5.—The weather is cold threatening more snow. Reports from all parts of Northern Illinois and Iowa say trains are considerably delayed, but none abandoned yet. In the far North the thermometer is very low but the weather moderating.

Sent West.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—Mrs. J. J. Astor has just sent another New Year's party of friendless children to homes in the West through the Children's Aid Society. About 100 boys and girls assembled on Tuesday at the office of the society and before their departure Mrs. Astor talked with many of them. One thousand boys and girls have now been placed in permanent homes through the kindness of this lady, at a cost of $15,000.

BIG LAND SUIT.

Dispute about Beach Land Involving Novel Questions of Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—A trial has just ended at May's Landing, Atlantic county, N. J., which involved property of enormous value, and brought up an entirely new question of law. About twenty-five years ago a land company owning a large part of what is now Atlantic City, in selling its shore front lots gave deeds to the land to storm tide mark, with the intention of reserving the title to the strip of beach between storm tide mark and ordinary high water mark, in order that they might give permission to erect bath-houses thereon as an additional inducement to the purchase of lots not fronting on the beach.

Contrary to expectations, instead of wearing away as was the case to the northward along the coast, the beach grew rapidly out into the ocean and now reaches nearly a quarter of a mile further out than when the beach lots were sold. The purchasers from the land company occupied the new land as fast as it formed. Some time ago the land company, which is yet in existence, laid claim to this real estate, now increased to great value, and began suit to oust the occupants. After numerous delays the case came to trial this week. The plaintiffs claimed that the deeds to storm tide mark which reserved a narrow strip of beach to the company reserved also.

ANY ACCRETION

which might come to that strip. The defendants set up that the boundary of storm tide mark was a movable one and that the title of the purchasers to it followed the mark, no matter where it went. The case went to the jury on Wednesday night after a charge decidedly in favor of the plaintiffs. The court directed the jury to bring in a special verdict containing answers to fourteen questions as to the facts of the case. The jury came in with answers in favor of the defendants in almost every instance. No judgment was rendered, but the verdict with the points of law raised was certified to the Court of Errors and Appeals for a final decision. There is, so far as has been discovered, no precedent in New Jersey law for the decision of such a case, the legal questions being entirely novel.

PROBABLE MURDER.

A Saloon-Keeper Beaten by an Ex-Member of the Legislature.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—A fracas occurred on the morning of the 27th ult. in the saloon of Dick Darling, No. 1217 Broadway, the place where Billy Tracy shot and killed Charley Miller, the bunko man, between the proprietor and "Jim" Irving, the manager of the Empire Garden, No. 506 Sixth avenue. During the fight Irving struck Darling on the head with the butt end of his revolver, inflicting severe injuries. Irving escaped at the time, but on the 29th ult. he was arrested and arraigned before Justice Bixby, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, and gave $300 bail for trial. Darling was not supposed at the time to be seriously injured, but his condition has been recently growing worse, and yesterday it was critical. It is believed that his skull is fractured, and, as a fatal result is feared, Coroner Martin last evening went to Darling's residence, No. 41 West Thirty-fifth street, and took his ante-mortem deposition, in which he described the assault. Acting under the instructions of the Coroner, Capt. Williams last night arrested Irving and locked him up at the West Thirtieth Police Station. Irving was formerly a Democratic member of the Assembly and while holding that position engaged in a disgraceful fight on the floor of the Assembly with one of his fellow-members.

SWINDLED.

Serious Allegations of a Lady Against a New York Broker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—James Lacy, a broker at No. 6 Wall street, has been arrested on a charge of swindling Mrs. L. K. Vandervoort out of $1,600. Mrs. Vandervoort complained to the police that she had been swindled by Lacy. She lives, she said, in Jersey City. She had owned a farm, which she had sold, and in payment for it had received $1,600 in promissory notes. She became acquainted with Lacy, and he succeeded in obtaining the notes, depositing with her bogus securities in exchange. She then believed him to be a reputable broker in good business standing. She discovered afterward that Lacy's securities were worthless, and she also ascertained that he had disposed of the notes obtained from her. When her complaint was made at the station the police remembered Lacy as one against whom similar complaints had before been made. Detective Oates, who had arrested him once before, was sent in search of him, and finally found him on Sixth avenue near Twenty-fourth street. The prisoner was taken to the New Street Station and locked up. It is believed that a number of complaints will issue against him, with similar charges. He is a well dressed, respectable-looking man, between 35 and 40 years, and possessing an excellent address.

A Long Lost Brother.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—Forty years ago Ludwig Fasznacht disappeared from his home in Reutlingen, Germany, and was no again heard of. The family became scattered in time, and one of the brothers came to Paterson, N. J., and started a little watch-repairing shop. A day or so ago another German stepped into the shop in Paterson to get his watch repaired, and giving the same name as the watchmaker, the latter asked what part of the world the customer came from. The answer led the way to the discovery that the customer and the watchmaker were brothers. The new-comer had been living until recently near Jerusalem, Penn., and was at the Centennial exhibition with some cedar wood furniture made by another brother. The Paterson watchmaker had, when he visited the Exposition, examined the exhibit and asked a number of questions about it, not having the slightest suspicion that the goods were the product of an establishment owned by one brother and that the man in charge was another. The two brothers, while in Jerusalem, adopted the name of Weber, which is the reason they escaped recognition in Philadelphia by the Paterson Fasznacht.

HELD FOR MURDER.

Conclusion of the Investigations in the Brooklyn Double Tragedy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—Coroner Parker held an inquest in the cases of Henry Hicks and Emma Jackson, the colored man and woman murdered by Alexander Jefferson in Buffalo avenue, Brooklyn. An affidavit of Dr. Jos. Creamer, who made a post-mortem examination, set forth that Hicks died from a gunshot wound and the woman came to her death from a stab wound in the neck. The statement of Celestial Jefferson, brother of the mnrderer, who was also shot by Alexander, but who recovered from the injuries, was put in evidence. He alleges that Alexander made threats that he would have the lives of his whole family "that he went to Mrs. Jackso'ns house and shot me first and then killed Hicks. Then he stabbed Mrs. Jackson and the girl, Annie Jackson." Celestial still wears a patch over the wound in his temple, which is not thoroughly healed.

"I was in the house," testified Juliet Jackson, "when Alexander Jefferson began the attack on the people in it. After firing the gun and killing Hicks, Alexander rushed into the room and seized Annie Jack. I made my escape through a rear window. Alexander called at the house on the afternoon of the murder. He took from the table and drew them across my throat. He showed me a pistol and said he wished Annie Jackson was at home. Then, after saying he would call again, he went away."

Capt. Folk, of the Fulton avenue police, in whose precinct the murder occurred, states that Alexander admitted to him that he had killed Hicks and Mrs. Jackson. "As I pulled the trigger of the gun," Jefferson said, "Hicks put his head in the way and got the charge. I fired the second time, and that doubled my brother up. After that I don't remember what I did. I believe I shot Mrs. Jackson with a pistol after cutting her with the knife."

Some of the jurors made inquiries as to Jefferson's insanity, but they were told by the Coroner that they had nothing to do with that question.

The verdict held Jefferson for the murder. The desperate negro is still in the hospital suffering from the pistol shot wound in his head which he inflicted in attempting to take his own life.

BREACH OF PROMISE.

A Servant Girl Wants $25,000 from a Diamond Broker's Son.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 5.—Among the last official acts of Judge Arnoux, of the Supreme Court, was the granting of an order of arrest against Joseph Lynch, a son of Mrs. Teresa Lynch, the well-known diamond broker, on a charge of breach of promise. He fixed the bail at $10,000. Mr. Lynch has been brought before Judge Ingraham, sitting in the Supreme Court, and upon application and a statement of facts he reduced the bail to $250, which was promptly furnished. The complainant is Susan Eagen, a domestic. In her affidavit that she was engaged as a servant by Mrs. Teresa Lynch, mother of the defendant, during the month of October, 1881. A friendship grew up between her and the son, which ripened into love, and Mr. Joseph Lynch made a proposition of marriage to her, which was accepted. In the latter part of December, 1881, the day for the nuptials was fixed and the defendant succeeded in accomplishing her ruin. This caused a rupture between them, and despite her many ardent appeals to fulfill his promise Mr. Lynch not only refused to marry her, but to contribute to the maintenance of herself and child. Miss Eagen sues for $25,000 damages.

MISS EAGEN AVERS

BOUND AND GAGGED.

Daring Robbery of a Farmer By Mounted Masked Men.

CHICAGO, January 5.—Four masked men captured, bound and gagged four inmates of J. E. Arnold's farm-house, twenty miles from Chicago, near Downer's Grove, Wednesday evening, and, securing $1,200 in cash, rode away on four of Arnold's horses. None were captured. An old farm hand is suspected.

Failures of the Week.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The failures of the past seven days, reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number 224, distributed as follows: Eastern States, 24; Western, 72; Middle, 38; Southern, 42; Pacific, 15; New York City, 17, and Canada, 16. Compared with last week this shows an increase of thirty-one, but the number is doubtless swollen by numerous small assignments made at the close of the year, though the parties had virtually failed long before. The prominent New York assignments are: U. H. Dudley & Co., canned goods; J. L. Brewer & Sons, hardware, and Brower & Leeds, hardware. In the country: Francis Carville & Son, of Halifax, N. S., and Carville, McKean & Co., St. Johns, N. B., stopped in consequence of the failure of the parent concern in England. Other failures in the country are not prominent, although a considerable number of fair-sized houses succumbed.

Rifling the Mails.

CINCINNATI, January 5.—An Evansville, Ind., special says: Charles Jackson, colored, mail agent on the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville Railroad, was arrested yesterday, charged with rifling the mails. He belongs to the best society of colored people here, and has been in office but six months. The work was done mainly among registered letters.

Embezzled.

CHICAGO, January 5.—A Milwaukee special says M. F. Kaimbach, a prominent merchant of Green Bay, was arrested on a charge made by Sprague, Warner & Co., Chicago, that he embezzled $4,000 intrusted to him in the commission business.

Railway Exposition.

CHICAGO, January 5.—Preparations for the Railway Exposition here are going rapidly forward. There is every indication of its being a success.

The Inter-Oceanic Canal.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—It is very evident that the projectors of the Nicaraguan Canal intend to try to get action on their measure even at this short session. A long communication from Prof. Johnson, the American delegate to the canal convention in Paris, in which he attacks the De Lesseps canal most vigorously, has been published in full by the Republican. Admiral Ammon, who is figuring for the Nicaraguan scheme, has been here feeling the way for the project, and having in company with him several prominent Californans, called on the President to talk about the matter. Word has been given out that the President and Secretary of State were very favorably disposed toward the scheme. It seems, however, in spite of the allegations to the contrary, that large sums of money are being "planted" along the line of the DeLesseps canal by its projectors, and there can be no doubt that it is to be pushed forward to an early completion, and a Nicaraguan canal or a Tehuantepec ship railway that expects to get first in the field must be alive and lose no time.

Social Salad.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—The reception to Gen. Grant at Gen. Beale's shows the popular regard for Grant to be still as warm as during his stay here. Among those who were present were Hon. Geo. Bancroft, the aged historian, whose hand was as warmly shaken by Gen. Grant as it was by President Arthur when he arrived at the White House on New Years Day. Chief Justice Waite was also among the early arrivals, as were Secretary Lincoln, Postmaster-General Howe, Gen. Sherman, ex-Speaker Randall, ex-Postmaster-General King, Justice Matthews, Gen. Hazen and Mr. Allen Arthur, the President's son. The ladies were eagerly enthusiastic in their attentions to Mrs. Grant and the General. Mrs. Don Cameron paid her respects in a sea-shell pink satin ball dress, with point lace and diamonds. Miss Waite, the daughter of the Chief Justice, in white surah silk, with lace drapings. Mrs. Stanley Matthews in black velvet and point lace. Mrs. Geo. B. Loring in white embroidered satin and diamonds, and Mrs. Gen. Hazen in pale blue satin and lace trimmings.

A handsome reception was tendered Mrs. Dr. Edson on Thursday, by her friends. The occasion being her sixtieth birthday.

Various News.

WASHITGTON, January 5.—The Cabinet meeting was short and unimportant.

The contract for slating the Court House and Post-office at Topeka, Kas., was awarded to Knisely Brothers & Miller.

B. H. Campbell, representing a syndicate of Chicago capitalists, is negotiating with the Secretary of the Interior for a lease of a tract of land thirty miles square in Indian Territory, belonging to the Cherokee and Cheyenne Indians. They purpose using it for grazing cattle and agree to cut only such timber as is necessary to provide posts for wire fences to enclose the land. They offer $50,000 rental for the land. The Indians are represented as being anxious to enter into the arrangement.

The First Comptroller decides that the expenses incident to the disposition of the Osage Trust and diminish reserve land and Osage ceded lands in Kansas can be paid out of sums realized from the sales of lands.

Important to Cattle Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—The report of the Treasury Cattle Commission was sent to the House to-day. It is a very voluminous document and a very important one to the cattle trade, giving much attention to the question of pleuro-pneumonia among cattle. It recommends the creation of cattle quarantine stations at Portland, Boston, New York and Baltimore, and that the Treasury Department have power to destroy all cattle affected with pleuro-pneumonia and to keep others in quarantine at the owners' expense where there is reasonable fear that the cattle in question are infected. The report says that England will not permit unobstructed importations of American beef unless the disease is entirely eradicated from this country. It estimates the losses of the past year by this disease at $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, and its prospective loss, unless wiped out, at $50,000,000 annually.

The Whisky Bill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jaauary 5.—Friends of the whisky bill are by no means sure the House will treat them as well as the Senate has. Dr. Rush, of Chicago, and Mohr, of Cincinnati, speaking of the situation this morning, said they expected some opposition in the House, though whether it was in an organized condition or would cause serious delay, they could not say. The banking as well as whisky interests of Louisville and Cincinnati are pushing the measure, and it probably will get through before the end of the session.

Laid on the Table.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—The House Judicial Committee to-day, after discussing Mr. Knott's resolution declaring all the Northern Pacific Railroad land grants forfeited, on motion of Mr. Knott laid it on the table. The House Judiciary Committee also agreed to report Mr. Anderson's resolution requesting the Secretary of the Interior to furnish the original maps, etc., of the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Western Kansas Pacific Railroad, with a view of ascertaining if that road is not holding large tracts of lands to which it is not entitled.

War Claims.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 5.—The House Committee on War Claims to-day agreed to report favorable the Rosecranz bill refunding the State of California $250,000 paid by the State on account of the expenses of Indian wars, and authorizing the Treasury Department to settle also favorably the claim of Capt. WASHINGTON, D. C., January 5.—Dr. McLean made his maiden speech in the House to-day. The District of Columbia bill was under advisement, and the question of the sum that should be paid to the gas company for lighting the streets under discussion. The price fixed by the bill was twenty-five per cent and an effort is being made to reduce the price. McLean took the floor and urged the adoption of the competitive system, saying that St. Louis, when it had competitive companies, got its gas light at sixteen per cent street lamps. Neal responded that there is but one company in Washington, to which McLean replied that if the right to complete were granted new companies would quickly spring up. McLean in making his first appearance was somewhat nervous, but was closely listened to, an honor not awarded many members.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—Senator Van Wick in presenting petitions for the passage of a bill to give increased pensions to one-armed and one-legged soldiers said the Committee on Pensions will probably reach a conclusion upon the subject at the meeting on Tuesday next and would report immediately thereafter.

Senator Platt said he hoped the committee would be ready to report after its next meeting, but he was not so confident of it as the Senator from Nebraska seemed to be.

Senator Ingalls presented a petition for the admission of Dakota as a State, and remarked in his opinion that opposition to such admission was wholly partisan and malignant.

Senator Vest denied that the opposition was of the character stated by Senator Ingalls, and asserted that it was made by Republicans as well as Democrats and based upon unanswerable facts.

Senator Garland charged that the first objection on the floor to the admission of Dakota came from Hale (Maine) on account of the manner in which the county of Yankton had dealt with its creditors.

Senator Hale said he had objected to the admission of Dakota on the ground stated by Garland because the repudiation of Yankton county had been sanctioned by territorial legislation and he thought it neither fit nor fair that his action should be characterized as it had been by Ingalls.

The bill was passed making an appropriation for a survey to ascertain the possibility of uniting the upper affluents of the Missouri and Columbia Rivers by canal.

Senator Vest, from the Committee on Territories, submitted a report in relation to the Yellowstone Park, and said he would call it up at an early day.

At 2 o'clock the presidential succession bill came up as unfinished business.

House.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—Mr. Ford, (Missouri), rising to a question of privilege, characterized as unqualifiedly false, the dispatch to the Globe-Democrat speaking of him as "a crank," and charging him with obstructing business.

Mr. Randall said he was unavoidably absent from the House yesterday. Had he been present he would have voted for the passage of the civil service bill.

Mr. Singleton (Illinois) did not hear his name called or would have voted against the bill.

The House then (in committe of the whole) took up the District of Columbia appropriation bill. It appropriates $3,443,847, being $81,642 less than estimates. The bill is substantially the same as the present law.

During a discussion relative to the appropriation for lighting the District of Columbia, Klotz, of Pennsylvania, charged that the Washington Gas-light Company controlled Congress, and that the company had a man in the employ of the House who kept them informed of the introduction of measures affecting gas interests.

Mr. Hiscock said that if Mr. Klotz made the charge against any member of the House he would bring in a resolution of inquiry.

NEARLY A MILLION.

The Losses Occasioned by the Fire Fiend To-day.

Several Mills and Manufactories Burned--Conflagration of Mills at Cohoes, N. Y.--The Other Fires--Losses and Insurance.

Burning.

COHOES, N. Y., January 5.—The rolling mills of Morrison, Colwell and Page are burning. The pilot mills of P. Gugerty and the tubing works of A. G. Curtis & Co. are in danger, as a high wind is blowing.

LATER.

The rolling mills are a total loss. The pilot mills are now burning fiercely.

The fire is now under control. Morrison, Calwell & Page's rolling mill, O'Brien & Powers' knitting mill and the Patrick Gugerty Pilot mills, totally destroyed. The loss will exceed $250,000; insured for two-thirds.

The fire originated in the wheel-pit of the rolling-mill. Work was suspended last Friday for repairs and was to be resumed this morning. During the severe cold last night the wheel was frozen in the pit. The engineer began thawing it out by the usual process, when by some accident the oil caught fire and the flames spread with most wonderful rapidity. The firemen did splendid work and successfully diverted the fire from the central portion of the city, which includes great knitting manufactories. A more rapid fire was never seen. Inside of one hour from the time the oil took fire in the wheel-pit, the entire works had been consumed and nothing left but the furnaces and their chimneys. The flames drove the workmen away so quickly they had no time to think of drawing the furnaces. Hence the loss was much greater than it otherwise would have been, as the iron will now have to cool in them and they will then have to be taken apart. The total loss on the rolling mill is now estimated at half a million dollars; insurance about $75,000. The flames were driven to the Pilot Mills, which were soon enveloped. The sight was a grand one.

THE FIRE RAN RIOT

through the oily and combustible material, and communicated from one story to another with great rapidity. Within five minutes this immense brick structure was totally enveloped in flames, and the firemen were utterly helpless to stay its progress. Soon the gasoline tank exploded, rending and leveling the walls. Loss on Gugerty's mill, $100,000; insurance $75,000. Powers & O'Brien's mill occupied a portion of the Pilot Mills building, and was involved in the general ruin. Loss, $30,000; partially insured.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Reading the Governor's Message—Adjournment Until To-Morrow.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., January 5.—The Assembly met in joint session this morning and canvassed the returns of the late State election, after which the branches convened separately to listen to the reading of the Governor's message. The Senate promptly ordered it printed without reading at length. In the House Speaker Richardson ruled that the message must be read at length. The Senate adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, when the body will adjourn over until Tuesday. The House did the same thing. Ten thousand copies of the message were ordered printed and its contents referred to the various standing committees. On Monday night Jackson day will be celebrated by an oration from Congressmen James M. Burnes and Alex. M. Dockery.

The St. Louis delegation's troubles are over, and at a meeting just held Frank Ketchum was elected Clerk, Mr. Bentley withdrawing his objection.

STREET-CAR EMPLOYES.

The Governor's Recommendation and Views of Managers of Roads.

In his annual message to the General Assembly Gov. Crittenden, quoting from the report of Labor Commissioner Spahhorst, says, referring to the long hours which street car employes are compelled to spend at their work: "Those employes are naturally deprived of all domestic associations and opportunities for physical, moral or mental improvement. It is not in the interest of the State to permit such demands to be made upon any class of its citizens. It is a compulsory labor and against the sentiment of the law and the instincts of humanity, and should be remedied."

In order to ascertain the views of the class of laborers referred to by the Governor, a reporter this morning boarded a number of street cars and questioned conductors and drivers concerning the length of time they are compelled to pass at their labor in order to earn a livelihood, and their individual opinions upon the Governor's utterances. The result of his investigation may be thus summoned up: On the Fifth street line the men are paid by the trip, 40 cents being the rate for conductors and 33⅓ cents for drivers. On two days of the week each man works eighteen hours and on five days they work fifteen. On all the other lines in the city the average number of hours for each man is sixteen and the rate of wages is $2 per day for conductors and $1 65 for drivers. There are three exceptions to this rule: the Bellefontaine Line, the Washington Avenue Blue Line and the South St. Louis Railroad. The men on the Bellefontaine and the Blue Line work twelve hours each day and their wages are $1 85; the men employed by the South St. Louis Company are said to work eighteen hours daily week in and week out. All of the men questioned by the reporter stated their full concurrence in the Governor's recommendation on their behalf. Subsequently the reporter called on Mr. Christian Peper, president of the Fifth street line, and on Mr. Julius Walsh, president of the Citizens' Railway. Mr. Peper said, after he had read the section of the Governor's message above referred to, that he was satisfied Gov. Crittenden had spoken his honest convictions on the subject.

"But," continued Mr. Peper, "so far as my line is concerned, the men are paid for each trip made and the can put in as much or as little time as they choose. A trip takes three hours. If a conductor makes six trips he puts in eighteen hours and earns $2 40. He can lay off whenever he chooses. All that he is required to do in case he wants to stop for a trip or so is to give notice at the office so that we can have a substitute to take his place."

"Then, so far as your road is concerned, the men can take as much time to cultivate the domestic virtues and to develop their mental, moral and physical condition as they choose."

"Exactly," said Mr. Peper, "and earn a fair living. Suppose a man only works twelve hours a day he earns $1 60. Now, remember that running a street car is comparatively light labor, and tell me how many men can earn $1 60 a day steadily at light labor?"

Mr. Julius Walsh stated that his company paid its conductors $2 per day and its drivers $1 65.

"We don't work our men more than from twelve to thirteen and a half hours a day and we do not deduct for meals. We have no complaints from our men, who are apparently satisfied. I believe their occupation gives them ample time to attend to their family and household duties."

STREET-CAR ROBBERS.

Another Case of Pocket-Picking on the Olive Street Line.

Two Ladies Adroitly Relieved of Their Wallets--Three Robbers Attack a Bob-Tail Car--Apathy of the Police--The Chief's Curious Statements.

The pick-pockets and thugs who have been working the Olive street line for the past week gave the passengers a breathing spell last night, no assaults being made and no pockets picked on the road. Other cases are, however, coming to light, which prove clearly that an organized gang of pick-pockets are doing the business. Mrs. Sutherland, who lives at 2632 Chestnut street, and her friend, Mrs. Barto, were the last victims reported, the ladies having had their pockets picked on the same night and a short while before the assault was made upon Messrs. Moffett, Laflin, Dickson and others. Mrs. Sutherland was seen this morning at her residence and she told the story of the manner in which the gang had treated her, laughing considerably at the adroitness with which the thing had been done.

"Myself and Mrs. Barto had been down at the First Presbyterian sociable on Wednesday night, We left there and took the car at Fourteenth and Olive streets about 10:45 p. m., going west. The car was crowded and we were compelled to stand. We had managed to get just inside the door, Mrs. Barto leaning against the door. Mrs. Barto is not very strong and I hoped that somebody would give her a seat. The gentleman who was with us, Mr. Ball, a railroad man, was unable to get into the car at all, and he stood on the rear platform."

"When did the pocket-picking occur?"

"Soon after we got on the car. The conductor was in the forward end collecting fares and coming towards us. I noticed two men who were sitting just behind where we were standing. One of them was stout and heavily built, and the other was young and well dressed. He looked very nice, but he could not have been a gentleman. As the conductor passed through where we were he crowded us, so that we had to lean over almost upon the two gentlemen whom I have mentioned. The car was crowded at the time. Then one of the men said that he thought there was a seat over in the other corner. He did so, I suppose, to divert my attention in another direction while he was reaching for my pocket-book. I attempted to peep over, and said that there was no room. After a short time we got seats on the other side of the car. The gentleman who was escorting us came in and stood before us, and as I looked over I saw that the two men to whom I have referred and that ladies were sitting in the places previously occupied by them. They had not remained in the car longer than it would take it to run two or three squares."

"When did you discover that you had been robbed?"

"Soon after we sat down Mrs. Barto said, 'I believe I have lost my pocket-book.' We said that she must be mistaken, and she then replied that she might be, as she was not sure whether she had taken her pocket-book with her when she came out or not. I never thought about pick-pockets for a minute, and never dreamed of looking to see whether my pocket-book was safe or not. When we arrived home Mrs. Barto ran up stairs, found that she had taken the pocket-book out with her and was then sure that she had lost it. At the same time I discovered that mine was gone also."

"It was very shrewdly done?"

"Yes, indeed, very adroitly. The men must have felt the pocket-books in our pockets when we were crowded over against them. Gentlemen usually say that it is a difficult thing to find a lady's pocket, but they found ours very easily. I had on a long satin cloak, so that they must have lifted that up also before they could reach my purse. I was lucky, because the day before I had been carrying my diamond ear-rings in my pocket-book, intending to get one of them fixed."

Both ladies lost small sums of money. Mrs. Sutherland's purse contained memorandum, papers, etc., and she has advertised, offering to allow the persons who took the pocket-book to keep the money if they return the memorandum and papers, which are of no use to them.

A NUMBER OF THUGS

attempted a robbery on the bob-tail extension of the South St. Louis Railroad about 10 o'clock last night. A bobtail car was climbing Chouteau's hill on the way to town, when three soldiers, two of them negroes and one a white man, boarded the car. One of the negroes went out on the platform and engaged the driver in conversation. Another stood on the rear step. The white soldier began to break the box. He suceeded in hammering off the outside lock, the padlock, while driver was engaged in conversation. The boy who drives the helping horse up the hill, attempted to get into the car, but the man on the step would not let him. The boy, however, saw all that was going on in the car. When the soldier found that there was another lock on the box he gave up the job and the three robbers left. The white man was afterwards arrested by the night watchman at the South St. Louis car stables and was taken by the police to the Gate Street Station. Two negro soldiers were arrested this morning and have been identified as the men who helped in the job.

CHIEF OF POLICE CAMPBELL

was called upon this morning, and he made the astounding statement that he did not think there was anything much in these reported street car robberies. He says, as will be seen below, that he thinks the occurrence on Wednesday night was only a personal difficulty between the strangers and Messrs. Moffett, Laflin and the other gentlemen.

"When these gentlemen," said Chief Campbell, "say that the young men with whom they had the disturbance Wednesday night are members of a gang of pickpockets working the Olive street cars they are, in my opinion, mistaken. The facts in that case are these: The car was loaded with ladies and gentlemen when the three young men boarded it and attempted to enter. Mr. Syl. Laflin, who stood in the door, refused to admit them, saying the car was crowded with ladies. Now the question of incommoding ladies is one of private judgment, which the young fellows did not propose to have Mr. Laflin or anybody else pass on for them. In the controversy which arose about their admission one of them struck Mr. Laflin in the face. Mr. Moffett, who come to Mr. Laflin's assistance, was treated in a like manner. To escape arrest they ran away. Now, this is all there is in the matter, and there is no foundation for the statement that the assaulters were a gang of pickpockets. The only case of pocket-picking that line of cars was reported last Tuesday when a watch was taken from a gentleman's pocket. Pickpockets do not ply their vocation in crowded street cars where there is no chance to escape in case they are detected."

That this is an extremely curious and wonderful statement, anybody who has read the details of the case, must admit. Chief Campbell says that the affair was only a personal difficulty, when Mr. Charles Dixon, superintendent of the Jefferson Avenue Street Car Line, in his published statement distinctly avers that as one of the strangers attempted to push into the car door, he, Mr. Dixon, felt the stranger's fingers in his vest pocket. Mr. Moffett was assaulted with a pair of brass knuckles, which would go to show that these pick-pockets would ply their vocation in a crowded street car, whatever Chief Campbell's experience has been to the contrary, and that in case escape was impeded, Mr. Maffett's pocket was also picked, so that the idea of a "personal difficulty," as the Chief chooses to call it, becomes extremely absurd in the light of the statements made in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH, as detailed by Messrs. Moffett, Laflin, Dickson and others. The Chief also says that but one case of a loss by pick-pockets on the Olive street cars has been heard of, viz., that of Mr. J. L. Peter's watch on New Year's night. Besides this, there is the case of James Grant, No. 2110 Olive street, whose pocket book and over ten dollars in money was taken on Tuesday night in the same way; the case of Messrs. Moffett and others given above, the cases of Mrs. Sutherland and Mrs. Barton, and one or two minor instances, all of which have been sufficiently talked about.

Citizens say that sometimes they do not report these things to the police for two reasons; first, because when a citizen goes to report these matters he is frequently treated rather coolly. The men who robbed Mrs. Sutherland and her friend were, in all probability, the same who figured in the subsequent attempt, as some of the gang got on the car just about where they left the ones containing the ladies, in the neighborhood of Eighteenth street.

CAPT. FRUCHTE

was of the same opinion as Chief Campbell. "In my opinion," said he, "it was a personal difficulty between the young fellows and the gentlemen on the car. The car was crowded with ladies, and these gentlemen refused admission to the young fellows, who got on at Nineteenth street. In the difficulty that arose Messrs. Laflin and Moffet were struck in the face, and that is all there is to it."

"You didn't think then they were pick-pockets?"

"There was nothing in this personal encounter to make me think so.

"I don't know of but one case of pocket-picking on that line of cars ever having been reported, and that was a few days ago, when a gentleman reported to the Chief that his watch had been stolen."

"Is there any gang of roughs in the habit of raising a disturbance on these cars?"

"No; there is not. The only other case I know of was last October, during Fair Week, and this was of exactly the same nature as last Wednesday night's disturbance. A crowd of young fellows got on the car and became involved in a difficulty with some of the passengers, and a row resulted. We arrested the young fellows, who were prosecuted in the Police Court. This was the only other disturbance I know of, and, like the trouble of last Wednesday night, was purely accidental."

SECRETARY WILLIAMS

was greatly disgusted with the statements made that the young fellows were doubtless pickpockets. "They were refused admission, and in their own way asserted their rights. It is not an unusual thing, however, to have all blame in matters of this kind transferred to the Police Department. Who ever heard of pickpockets adopting such tactics as these—getting on a street car and raising a row, laying themselves liable to arrest right there. The trouble arose out of the controversy about admitting them to the car which they naturally supposed they were entitled to notwithstanding the opinion of the gentlemen already in the car."

It will be seen how beautifully these opinions harmonize with the statement of the troubles as given yesterday. Mr. Williams learnedly says that pickpockets would not act in that way, and Mr. Dickson's reply is that a stranger, one of the gang, had his finger in Dickson's watch pocket.

The directors of the road say that care will be taken to prevent such outrages as far as possible.

FOUR COURTS NOTES.

Doings of the Officers and Tribunals at Twelfth and Clark Avenue.

To-day Judge Van Wagoner, in the Criminal Court, commuted the fine of A. J. Smith, who pleaded guilty to an assault, to $10 and costs. The defendant was discharged on the payment of this. The charge was originally assault to kill, but, on account of mitigating circumstances, he was released as above stated.

Henry Bishop to-day pleaded guilty to stealing two saws from George Strube, and was sentenced to two years in the Penitentiary by Judge Van Wagoner. Bishop was accused of burglary and larceny.

The Donnelly libel case was resumed this afternoon in the Court Criminal Correction.

Charles Carroll should have gone to trial in the Criminal Court to-day on a charge of robbing James Graves. James is now in the Memphis Jail on a similar charge. Carroll's case was accordingly continued generally.

Rosa Deck and Fidel Dick, the principal prosecuting witnesses in a case in which Louisa Lemmel was defendant to acharge of grand larceny, disappeared, and Louisa was discharged to-day in the Criminal Court.

John Mason and John Burns were docketed for trial in the Criminal Court to-day on a charge of robbery. Burns escaped from jail last November, and the case against him was accordingly continued generally. Mason went to trial.

A Curious Case.

A letter appealing for aid for a Mrs. Martin, who, it was stated, lived at 908 St. Louis avenue, was received some days [illegible] Mr. Joseph Franklin, of Wm. Barr & Co. The letter stated that Mrs. Martin was in destitute circumstances, and it was signed "Miss M. Smith, assistant housekeeper, Laclede Hotel." Mr. Franklin inclosed $5 in an envelope and sent it to "Miss Smith" on the 4th inst.; but the letter and money were retured, no such person being known at all at the Laclede Hotel. It was probably an attempt on the part of some sharper to impose on Mr. Franklin, who is known to be charitable, the writer thinking the relief would be sent directly to the address on St. Louis avenue.

WALTER BROWN, the child of Annie Brown, died at 1026 Market street to-day without medical attendance.

CHRISTINE'S COMING.

The Swedish Songstress to Arrive in St. Louis this Evening.

Preparations for Her Reception at the Southern—A Panacea for Operatic Sore Throat—How the Queen of Song Travels—Personnel of Her Company.

The office force at the Southern Hotel this morning were all agog with expectations at the promised arrival by the Missouri Pacific train of Mme. Christine Nilsson. A carriage had been ordered for 6 o'clock in the morning and a warm fire was blazing in the grate of parlor 66, but interest in the promised distinguished arrival was deepest in the hotel office, where even the phlegmatic Capt. Warner gave way to feelings of perturbation as the time slipped by and no indication was had of the approach of the fair songstress. Harvey Willard, too, usually the most imperturbable of hotel clerks, gave evidence of internal disquietude, and even the coldly distant and frigidly reserved Frank Candee moved uneasily in his lair and sighed with ill-suppressed emotion as he looked at the electric clock and saw that the hour of the prima donna's coming had gone by and that she had failed to put in an appearance. By and by it was discovered that Mme. Nilsson had o changed her plans that her arrival was postponed until 6 o'clock in the evening, when, by way of compromise with the POST-DISPATCH reporter, who was also awaiting the artist's coming, Mr. Willard took him upstairs to the apartments which had been reserved for her. These consist of rooms 66, 68 and 70 on the parlor floor—a suite consisting of large parlor and sleeping apartments which are magnificently furnished and are only occupied when such truly great people as Presidents and prima donnas, or such actually wealthy persons as railroad kings make their appearance—always making an exception of course, in favor of such bridal couples as are possessed of long purses, for whose especial comfort the rooms are supposed to have been originally planned.

"Upon this bed," said Mr. Willard, waving his hand toward the satin-draped mahogany which occupied a corner of room 68, "only the truly great are allowed to repose. Here slept Gen. Grant, fresh from his tour around the world. Here lies Jay Gould when he comes to St. Louis. Here reclined the pretty form of Adelina Patti, and here, here—"

"Didn't Oscar Wilde sleep in that bed when he was here?" chimed in the bell-boy, who had slipped into the room unobserved.

"He did not," sternly rejoined Capt. Warner, with an intimation that bell-boys should not supply information unless directed to do so. "Three dollars and a half was as much as Oscar Wilde ever paid for a room in this house, and even then it brought anguish to his æsthetic soul that he had not secured a room at three dollars. No, sir; and when Oscar Wilde left the country, in my opinion he did not have enough money left to take this suite of rooms for a day."

"And then," said Mr. Willard, "resuming the historical category of some of the former occupants, "there have been British aristocrats by the dozen, Dukes, and Earls and Marquises, and foreign Counts, and lastly and best of all, bridal parties in great number. The very walls, if they could speak, would breathe a story of love such as—"

"Mr. Willard," said Capt. Warner, with more asperity in his tone than when he was rebuking the bell-boy, "the reporter is not interviewing bridal-chamber walls this morning. Let us descend to the office."

The party descended and the reporter crossed from the hotel to the Olympic Theater, where he met Manager Norton, to whom he at once put the question.

"How's this about Nilsson's cold? Is there any chance of her not appearing to-morrow evening?"

"Not the slightest, my boy. We have a panacea right here in the box-office that would cure a prima donna of chronic laryngitis in five minutes."

As he spoke Mr. Norton produced the box-office diagram for the Saturday evening concert. Every seat had been marked off by the eager purchasers.

"That's the sort of thing," he explained, "that conquers operatic sore-throat quicker than all the cough-mixtures in the world. Oh, yes, Madame Nilsson will sing here to-morrow evening beyond a shadow of a doubt."

In reply to a request for

THE PROGRAMME OF THE CONCERT,

Mr. Norton stated that the official document had not yet been received, but that it was safe to say that, with possibly one or two changes, it would be as follows:

By the time the Nilsson party reaches here this evening it will have traveled 6,000 miles. This entails hard work, but the comfort of the prima donna and her associates is well looked after by the management.

THE SPECIAL CAR

in which they travel is one of the completest of sleeping, drawing-room and dining-room cars combined. The interior apartment is the drawing room during the day and the sleeping room at night. Its most conspicuous ornament is a magnificent upright piano, provided especially for the use of the Madame. Instead of the usual berth arrangement of transformed seats, its sleeping compartments are made of movable iron rods. Here also meals are served. Here in the day time can be seen Signor Ginseppe del Puente, the famous baritone, Miss Hope Glenn, the coming contralto, M. Theodor Biorksten, the tenor, who is a cousin of Col. R. P. Yorkston, the Americanized form of the Swedish surname of this city, and the Mendelssohn Quintet, Club, consisting of Messrs. Isidor Schnitzle, first violinist; Ernst Thiele, the flutist; Thomas Ryan, the viola and clarionet player; Wm. Schade, the flute and viola player, and Frederick Giese, the celloist. In the rear of the car is a comparatively commodious kitchen, which contains an excellent range and a well-freighted pantry. Adjoining the drawing room is Mme. Nilsson's private compartment. A large, highly-finished article of furniture and ornament, which contains lockers for valuables, serves the triple purpose of dressing case, writing desk and bed.

MME. NILSSON'S CAREER.

Christine Nilsson has been before the world so long and so prominently that there is not much need to write a biographical sketch of her. Such sketches have appeared by the thousand, but perhaps it is in order to give a few facts for the benefit of those who do not charge their memories with biographical facts, even concerning the greatest celebrities. On August 3 last, Mme. Nilsson was 39 years old. She was born in Wederslof, Sweden. Her parents were poor. Christine manifested her musical tendencies, and at a very early age was an admirable performer on the violin and flute, and she and her brother used to go around the country singing, while she played the accompaniments on the violin for food or to earn money wherewith to get it. Her fortune was made in 1857. A Mr. Tornerhjelm, mayor of a small Swedish town, heard her singing one day in the streets, recognized her gifts and sent her to school. Three years later she appeared upon the stage at Stockholm, made a success and then was sent to Paris to complete her education under Masse and Wartel. Her debut was made in Paris in "La Traviata," in 1864, and was an instant and spontaneous success. She was engaged on the spot for three years and sang in the Theatre Lyrique. In 1867 she visited London and triumphed. In 1868 she was in Paris again, and in 1870 she visited America under the management of Strakosch, and made a successful tour of the United States. She was uniformly successful and the favorite of the musical world during all the years up to her retirement from the stage, which took place upon her marriage to Auguste Rouzaud, a gentleman of good descent and French family. The marriage took place in Westminster Abbey, on February 27, 1872, was signalized by the presence of royalty and was a most brilliant affair. The marriage was one of love, but the result was sad. Mr. Rouzaud became involved in speculations on the Paris Bourse, and last year's panic swept away what money he had, and all of his wife's fortune. He became insane, and last February died in the asylum. Mme. Nilsson then found herself compelled to take to the stage again. Her courage and her misfortunes, no less than her voice and skill, assured her a warm welcome, and she was enthusiastically received in England, and specially invited, or "commanded" to sing before the Queen. Upon the heels of this success, Mr. Abbey secured her for a season in America, and the season thus far has been a series of triumphs. She receives from Mr. Abbey $1,800 for every night she sings, and the traveling expenses of herself and two servants are paid.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION.

The grain markets started in this morning with the tendency strongly upward in prices and a bullish feeling well developed in the local crowd. This bull movement characterized all the markets of this country and was strengthened by reported advances in Europe. It was looked upon by some as due to speculative manipulation in Chicago, where the crowd is said to be on the buying side. Others believed it was the natural reaction from the depression of the past six weeks, when nearly every one was on top and hammering prices. The damage to the crops in Europe by floods is said to be fully equal to 25 per cent. Germany, France, Hungary, Switerland and other countries have been inundated and their crops are believed to have suffered seriously. England's crop, too, is said be in danger. Reports are also being circulated as to threatened damage to the wheat planted in this country. There seems to be a strong effort just now to force an advance, but whether it can be maintained or not is a question in a good many minds. Speculators are believed to have taken hold of corn in Chicago, with Truman Handy at the head of the deal. The country roads are in better condition now than for a long time past and increased receipts of corn are looked for—enough, perhaps, to knock the props out from under this deal, if there is any such. Oats, too, is believed to be in a pocket and with a better chance for success than corn. The stock is very small in this market, but so is the line out for January. The higher prices in grain did not hold in Chicago, as McGeogh, Kershaw, Roach and others commenced selling freely, and this weakened the market, the St. Louis market following suit, but the close of the regular board was firm and at an advance over yesterday's prices.

Flour—Receipts 3,542 brls. This market continues to show signs of improvement, and although there is no remarkable degree of activity observable, the movement is satisfactory. To-day trading was good, and with the active demand values strengthened and some grades exhibited an advance of 5 to 10c, while others were wholly unaffected. The following will show the various changes. We quote Extra fancy $4 85@5 00; fancy $4 75@4 85; choice $4 50@4 60; family $4 05@4 15; xxx $3 50@3 65; xx $3 10@3 25; x $2 85@2 95; superfine $2 75@2 80; fine $2 55@2 60; favorite brands 25c higher: patents $5 30@6.

Buckwheat Flour—Quiet, demand fair; Western $6 50@6 75; New York $7@7 25.

Cornmeal—Still dull and very quiet at $2 30@2 35 on orders delivered; grits, pearl meal and hominy at $3 50@3 60.

Rye Flour—Firm at $3 50@3 60.

Barley—Receipts—Sks 17,500 bu. Nothing that could be called a market was turned up in the 'barley corner." Sellers were standing around waiting for a buyer to turn up and the buyers were not there to any extent. Even deliveries upon contracts were small. We quote: Rejected 40@45; No. 3 50@55; prime to strictly prime 60@62½; choice 65@75; fanco 80@85.

Hay—Receipts 140 tons. For best grades, but fancy more especially, there was a good and even urgent demand, but for lower qualities there was no particular inquiry. This side—Prairie $9@9 50; red top $9; timothy $13@17. East track—Mixed $11 75; timothy $12@15.

Millfeed was as strong as a scant supply and stiff holders could make it, and prices went up considerably, as there was an urgent speculative demand. Sacked bran sold at 63@65 at mill, 62@64½ E. track; bulk at 54@55 E. track.

Provisions—Receipts 126,000 lbs meats, 2,000 lbs lard, 4,180 grease. The market can be called steady, but it was also just as dull and flat as for some time past. Job lots of pork were held at $16 20 for hard side and $17 for standard; round lots offered at $17 spot and January, with $16 90 bid; February at $17 20, bid $17; May at $17 50, bid $17 45. Prime steam lard was salable at 9⅝ loose and 10.20 packed, though an early sale of loose was at 9.67½. In dry salt meats the only sale was of boxed short clear at 8.90; the principal holder of fully-cured loose asked 6.40 for shoulders. 8.60 for longs and clear ribs and 9 for short clear. Packed bacon short clear sold at 10¼. Hams 12@13. Tallow 7⅝@7¾ for prime in oil brls. and choice cake, falling lots off and irregular pkgs. grease tallow 6½@¾. Breakfast bacon 12½@13½. Grease 5¼@5¾ for brown, 6@7 for yellow, 7½@9 for white. Beef—Extra mess $12@16 per brl according to brand; $7 50@8 50 per half brl; dried 11½@12; ½ strictly choice 15 per pound. Highwines—Locally unchanged at $14: movement light, sales amounting to 180 brls. Cincinnati steady at $1 13; Chicago at $1 16: Peoria at $1 13.

Lead—Holds firm, though the market is quiet. Refined is reported as readily saleable at $4 25, with holders asking more, and it is pretty well understood that a sale or so has been made lately at $4 30. On this basis hard is worth $4 25, and at any rate is held at that. Spelter, dull and nominal at $4 37½@4 50.

Grass seeds—Movement light and market rather quiet, but unchanged and firm. All kinds of prime seed salable at the following: Clover $6 25@6 50, red-top 50@65, timothy $1 60@1 65, German millet 80@90, common do 50@55, Hungarian 5c@5½. Sales 50 sks clover at $6 50.

Flaxseed—Quiet but steady at $1 14.

Hempseed—Slow at $1 32½@1 25.

Castor Beans—Quiet; crushers offering only $1 35 on a basis of pure. Sales 188 sks at $1 35, 17 sks rejected at $1 30.

Wheat—Receipts 286 sks, 14,400 bu. Higher. Better markets elsewhere continued to exert a strengthening effect here, and there was free buying, the volume of trading in futures being largely increased, but the highest prices were not maintained, though the close was 1⅜c higher for January, ¾c for February, ⅝c for March, ⅞c for April and ¾@⅞c for May, as compared with the close of yesterday. The offerings of cash grades were small, and this limited business greatly, as the inquiry was good, coming in the main from shippers, speculators dividing the No. 2 red with them. No. 2 Mediterranean was urgently sought for, and again advanced a couple of cents. No. 2 red cash 98⅝ regular; January 99@98¾, closing 98⅞; February 99¾ to $1 00⅛; March $1 02@$1 02@⅛, closing $1 02¼ bid; April $1 03⅞@$1 04 to $1 04; May $1 04⅝ to $1 05⅜ @½, closing $2 05⅜; No. 3 red 92⅝@92¾ regular, 93 in E.; No. 4 87 asked regular, 86 bid; rejected 80 in C.; No. 2 Mediterranean $1 this side (later $1 01½ bid) and $1 02½ E. side; No. 3 do 93 bid this and 94 E. side.

Corn—Receipts —— sks, 53,350 bu. Higher, with a strong market during the early hours, but weakening off some latter, in these fluctuations following the course of other markets. The close was at advances of ¾c for January, ¼c for February and ⅜c for May over yesterday's close. Cash grades did not improve much in price, but were firm. No. 2 mixed and No. 2 white-mixed sold for speculation and new mixed and rejected chiefly on order account, but other grades dull; No. 2 mixed cash 45 regular; January 45⅛ to 45¼, closing 45½; February 46¾ to 46¼, closing 46⅜; March 47½, and later 47¼ asked: April 48¼; May 49½ to 49⅛, closing 49⅜; No. 2 white-mixed 45¼ regular; new do 43½ bid E. and 43⅝ this side; rejected do 42½ bid E. and 42⅝ this side; new mixed 43¼ in C., 43½ in St. L., 43¾ E. side; rejected 42 42 St. L. and C., 41½ in E., no-grade 41 in E.

Oats—Receipts 430 sks, 3,600 bu. Higher, but futures slow, as there were not so many buyers as yesterday, though sellers were scarce, too. The May option did not hold its own, and closed the same as yesterday, while January was ⅝ higher and February ¼ better. Cash grades were firm and met with steady sale to order and feeding buyers. No. 2 cash 37½ in St. L. and E., 37 bid regular; January 36⅞ to 37; February 37⅛ to 37¼; May 37⅜ to 37; rejected 36 in C., 37 in St. L.

Rye—Receipts —— sks., 1,100 bu. There was no change in this market, the few offerings selling at steady rates to fill orders, grade No. 2 selling at 55 in C. 56 E. side and rejected at 51 regular, with 51 bid E. side.

Cotton.

Spots on this the closing day of the cotton week are unimproved, all the markets, without an exception, ruling quiet, easier or dull. The movement in the local market was moderate, with transactions aggregating 582 bales. At New York sales amounted to 437 bales. The various future markets were still in the decline, New York opening steady at a decline of 5 to 8 points, but as the day drew to a close a slight upward movement was disclosed, although it was not sufficient to recover the decline since last evening. New Orleans was barely steady and 2 to 4 points off, but like the first named, showed an upward tendency. At Liverpool futures were lower at the opening, and closed dull at a still further decline. Yarns and fabrics at Manchester dull.

CATTLE—The liberal supply of yesterday was entirely cleaned up before the close of the market, and as the receipts have proved very light since then, there was not much trading indulged in this morning, although buyers were on hand and showed a disposition to buy. However, it was for the best, as the near close of the week would have prevented buyers purchasing as freely as at other times, and the light run assisted in keeping the market upon a firmer basis. The feeling was very steady and values may be quoted firm with an upward tendency, which dealers are confident will develop into an advance by the first of next week, should nothing very serious happen, and the supply prove of the right discription. The demand now being for good smooth steers and cows suitable for butchers, and heavier steers for shipment, these descriptions sell readily at quotations.

HOGS—The condition of the market this morning at the opening exhibited a decided improvement. The feeling was very strong and values strong at an advance of 5c in both packing and butchers' grades. A brisk demand characterized the market from the start, and packers, taking hold freely, soon absorbed the supply, which only consisted of 60 car loads. Light hogs were the only description that did not partake of the general improvement and, in fact, there being but a limited demand for these, they showed considerable weakness and were quoted fully 10c lower than on yesterday. The volume of business to-day was as large as the rather light offerings would admit of, the bulk of the sales being made to packers at a range from $6@6 30, the outside being for hogs averaging considerably over 300 lbs, to butchers. Sales were few at $6 25@6 30. Taken altogether the day's market was most satisfactory, except in the small receipts, for had they been twice or three times as large they would have all been disposed of, as buyers were eager to buy and sales were made readily, there being little or no urging necessary. Considering the nearness to the close of the week a better or more active market was not looked for. Quotations at 11 a. m. were strong at $5 60@5 80 for light to good Yorkers; $5 90@6 10 for mixed packing; $6 15@6 20 for extra do, and $6 25@6 30 for butchers' to extra heavy.

POST-DISPATCH,

There is most too much of Most in the newspapers. The reckless Communist should be allowed to drizzle in neglect.

Langtry will not be without a Freddy as she moves about the country. Freddy Schwab has taken charge of her business.

We have a little card to-day from Dr. S. S. Laws, of the State University, anent Prof. Spencer and the troubles which are at present embittering his existence.

The scandal connected with the death of Gambetta does not seem to be well authenticated. Imaginative journalism flourishes in Paris not less vigorously than in this country.

We are all civil service reformers now. Some of us did not know it until this morning, and the news comes rather suddenly but we are all in favor of it. Bring on your examiners.

Ohio has three candidates for Sergeant-at-Arms of the next House—Thompson, Leedom and Steedman. The Ohio Democrats must have an idea that they were ordained to preserve order.

It doesn't make any difference, Mr Globe-Democrat, who invented the game of draw-poker; the undying honor of reducing the game to rules and metes and bounds belongs to Gen. R. C. Schenck.

Shall we not hear from the Republican on the subject of repealing the deposition law? It seems to us but a week ago the Republican folks were opposed to the abuses connected with the taking of depositions.

With the passage of the Civil Service Reform bill Mr. George W. Curtis and Mr. Dorman B. Eaton may regard their occupation as gone. They are in the position of a clergyman who hears that the devil is dead.

The British Government has determined that whenever it finds any Irishman "intimidating" it, it is going to run him in. The facility with which a solitary Irishman can intimidate the British Government is astonishing.

It is now a part of the law of the United States that no one who habitually uses intoxicating liquor to excess shall sign his name on Uncle Samuel's pay roll. The inference is that the law must have been badly needed.

Tally one for little Cox. He saved the country the infliction of two weeks of palaver on the civil service bill in the House, and secured the passage of the bill. If Cox would only cease to be funny, he would soon begin to be great.

If all of Ben Butler's recommendations are carried out the millennium may be expected to begin in Boston about sixty days after date, but we would not advise the people of Massachusetts to begin ordering their ascension robes just yet.

Gov. Crittenden forgot to mention in his message the successful transit of Venus, which took place in Missouri a short time ago, and yet it is evident from the dimensions of his document that he sincerely meant to overlook nothing.

The public is waiting with some anxiety for an explanation from Mr. David Powers, President of the Board of Assessors, of his remarkable valuation of the School Board property on Sixth street, whereby the School Board is done out of several thousand dollars of revenue.

English noblemen who had made up their minds to pass the summer in slaughtering game in the Yellowstone National Park are hereby warned that Senator Vest has drawn up a little bill prohibiting that amusement, and limiting the destructiveness of the hunters to wild cats, mountain lions and similar wild fowl.

Governor Crittenden thinks the deposition law ought to be amended. We agree with him and go further to remark that when a law of that kind comes to be amended, the process should resemble the surgical operation of amputating a dog's tail, concerning which science says that the best place to amputate is just behind the dog's ears.

In speaking on the bonded whisky bill, Senator Beck made a strong argument in favor of maintaining the duty on spirits when he said that whisky had paid the Government one thousand millions of dollars. There is no other tax which has done so much service to the public at such little cost to the individual, and it should be maintained.

These are the days when Governors' messages are plenty in the land, and long, alas, as the moral law. From New York, from Boston, from Jefferson City and from other localities where Governors are inaugurated and Legislatures convene come messages which burden the telegraph wires and exhaust the patience of the public. Even the Mayors deliver themselves of messages, and the soul of the editor is in travail and his heart is a weight in his bosom at the thought that he is expected to read them all. But he does not read them because he knows that they are stuffed with virtue even as the sausage in its skin, that their recommendations cover every conceivable possibility of legislation, and that a prayer-meeting itself is not more redolent of goodness than these messages. It is the function of the executive to take charge of the body politic, and to heal all its ills with words, and as words are cheap we get a great many of them. We could almost be content to see a Governor who had less virtue if only one of them would use fewer words.

Mr. S. R. Reed, who has heretofore enjoyed the distinction of being Deacon Smith's "Wicked Partner," will retain an office in the old Gazette building and write his beautiful essays on war and Hamlet's madness for the Commercial Gazette over modest small-cap initials. It is evident that Messrs. Reed and Halstead have not been altogether reconciled, and that the lamb is not inclined to take up a recumbent position in the immediate vicinity of the lion.

MR. GOULD AND THE LAW.

Gov. Crittenden calls the attention of the General Assembly to that clause in the State Constitution which forbids the consolidation of two parallel and competing lines of railroad, and which also forbids corporations which own and operate such lines to elect one man to the same position in both companies. The Governor alludes to the charge that this law has been openly and persistently violated, and he admits the importance of vindicating the law in such cases. But as it provides that the question whether two lines are or are not parallel and competing lines shall be submitted to a jury, he seems to be afraid of prejudicing the case and takes care to say that he does not know of any violation of that particular law. The facility with which State administrations ignore flagrant violations of law by rich corporations and great railroad kings has of late been the subject of frequent comment, and the extreme delicacy and caution with which they refer to such matters proves how firm is their determination that no corporation shall suspect them of insubordination. Gov. Crittenden also suggests that the Missouri law was made for the purpose of applying the police power in those cases where a consolidation or joint management is against the public interest. But it so happens that the State Constitution itself decides the question of public interest, proclaiming the consolidation or joint management of parallel or competing lines against public interest and unlawful. The only question left for a jury to decide is whether two roads owned and operated by two different corporations, running by different routes from the first city of Missouri on the east side of the State to the second city of Missouri on the west side of the State, are parallel and competing lines. If so, the election of Mr. Jay Gould as President of both corporations, and five of his partners as managing directors, vice-presidents, etc., is a violation of law, and the failure of the State administration to bring so plain a case before the proper tribunal is calculated to give the people, we fear, an exaggerated idea of the undue influence of Mr. Gould in our State affairs.

THE DEPOSITION LAW.

In his message Gov. Crittenden speaks emphatically of the abuses and evils which have grown out of the laws governing the taking of depositions. Nothing that can be said in condemnation of these evils can be too severe, and the notorious manner in which the abuses have thrust themselves on the attention of the people relieves us from any necessity of dilating on them. As soon as the deposition law began to work it was plainly to be seen that it offered an invitation to the shysters and hangers-on of the bar to work it for purposes of extortion and persecution, and the use which has been made of it for those purposes is quite sufficient to call for its repeal.

It is probably the only law on the statute book which is wholly an unmixed evil. With all the support it lends to the basest purposes, it has not even the excuse of being necessary to the administration of justice. Whenever it is necessary to take testimony of absentees to be used in suits at law, proper authority can be obtained, but under the deposition law the rule has been to set to work to take the depositions and testimony outside of court of persons who were at all times within the jurisdiction of the court and ready to give their evidence under those guaranties which the Judge throws around legal proceedings but which the Notary rejects.

A law which is described truthfully by the Governor of the State in his official message as one which "is frequently taken advantage of by the unscrupulous and malevolent, and is converted into an engine to destroy character and extort blackmail," ought not to be permitted to cumber the statute books any longer than can be helped. It has already brought the administration of justice into disrepute, and the Legislature should not adjourn without removing its obvious and glaring evils.

THE REPUBLIC SAVED.

We take great pleasure in announcing that the Republic is safe, or at least that it will be safe as soon as President Arthur signs the civil service reform bill, which we may expect him to do as soon as a clean copy of the bill is presented to him for his signature. The country was not safe yesterday, because it was not certain that the House would pass the civil service reform bill, and two weeks ago, before the Senate had passed the bill, the country was exposed to danger, its very existence was imperiled by the evils of the spoils system, the corruptions of Federal influence and the vast and varied array of perils that menaced us because we did not have the protection of the Pendleton bill.

There were thousands and hundreds of thousands of the best citizens of the country who have been kept awake at night by the sense of impending danger arising from the corruptions of politics. They have worn themselves out warning their careless and callous fellow-citizens of the dark abysses of corruption into which we were madly rushing, and now they have their reward; their warning has not been in vain; the dark night is past, and as the morning breaks the beautiful aurora of civil service reform brightens the horizon and assures us that the Republic still lives.

How happy we ought to be that so great an evil is cured by so slight a remedy. One would hardly think that so small a pill could cure so deep-seated and inveterate a disease, but we have had sufficient assurance from those who know that the panacea for all our political ailments is merely a little bill—not a little pill, but a little bill; and, with the passage of that little bill (not the little pill) we may expect to see favoritism, incompetence, corruption, spoliation and scandalous politics wholly disappear forever—perhaps.

THE INCREASE OF BUSINESS.

In their report of the failures for the past year, Dun & Co. say that the increase in the failures is not greater than the increase in the number of firms doing business. This would be a pleasant assurance if it were true, but unfortunately there are only too many evidences for believing that the increase in the number of business firms does not keep pace with the increase of the country in population and wealth. The familiar expression that "the big fishes eat up the little ones" is especially appropriate to the business situation in this country at present, in which we have daily illustration that the great business concerns drive the smaller ones out of competition. The Standard Oil Company has driven all other companies from carrying on the same business. The watch business is a monopoly, the manufacture of arms, of sewing machines, of gun powder, is carried on under a monopoly arrangement; the vinegar men have pooled their issues, and the whole tendency of business is toward consolidation and monopoly. Even the drama is getting to be a "pool," and the prospect is that in the near future some dramatic Jay Gould will appear among the managers and organize the resources of the drama into one vast combination which will lease all the theaters, hire all the actors, dictate its terms to the nation, and compel us to accept only such plays as it furnishes. These are evidences that the increase of business firms does not keep pace with the increase of population, and we are afraid that during the past year there may have been more old firms that went out of business than there were new firms that came in.

GIVE THE FIGURES.

An indignant pauper writes to the New York Sun protesting against being called on to support a government "which gives one man two hundred millions of dollars and leaves forty-nine million of people without a cent." As a matter of fact it is not the Government which has made Vanderbilt or Gould so wealthy, nor is it wholly due to bad laws or defective governmental regulation that a great many people in this country are poor.

Still the complaint is worth listening to, and it would be well worth while for the Census Bureau to turn its attention from the idle and useless information which fills vast volumes of its decennial report, and tell us something of the actual condition of the people. The census makes an estimate of the value of the property in this country, but it tells us nothing of the way in which the property is divided. It would be something worth knowing if we could know just how many people have any share or lot in the ownership of the aggregate wealth of the nation, and how many people dependent on them share in the returns of that ownership. Then we would be able to know how many people there are in this country who own nothing. We do not know what kind of a result would appear, nor do we greatly care. What we do care for is the truth, and whether the exhibit be flattering or the reverse, it is information which it would benefit this country to know, if it could learn just how it stands, and what is the real condition of its millions of people.

Having seen the first number of the Commercial Gazette, under the joint management of Field Marshal Halstead and Deacon Richard Smith, we detect a large amount of latent virtue in the consolidation and but little of what has long been the cakes and ale, the chief delight of Cincinnati readers. The disposition of human nature to stop and "see it out," if it is only two terriers or two bantams that are fighting, was powerfully illustrated in the avidity with which people bought the Commercial to see how the Field Marshal thumped the Deacon, or bought the Gazette to see how the wicked partners struck back at Halstead. Since these great combatants have become as "two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one," we shall wait with some foreboding to see how the interest is to be kept up. Perhaps the Enquirer may pitch in so spiritedly as to keep the combined fighting talent of the consolidation steadily employed. Otherwise there is reason to apprehend a total lapse of all outside interest in Cincinnati journalism, which is nothing if not personal and piquant in the highest degree.

In commending Justice Field's decision in favor of the California monopolists, and making known their desire that the Supreme Court shall confirm it in deciding the pending appeal, the New York Tribune imagines that it has put the whole question in a nutshell by asking: "Can the State discriminate against partnerships? Can it guarantee certain rights to two citizens separately, but withdraw them when these citizens conduct their business together?" Now, reverse the question and it answers itself, thus: Can a State guarantee certain rights to two or more citizens banded together in a corporation, but withdraw those same rights from these citizens doing business separately? If a corporation is endowed with personal rights under the Fourteenth Amendment, to such an extent that a State cannot deny to corporations the rights it concedes to natural persons, neither can it endow corporations with rights which it withholds from natural persons. How will the monopolists like this application of the equality principle?

"I cannot cure rheumatism," said the old-fashioned quack, "but I can throw him into fits and I am death on fits." Much the same is the new-fashioned religious quack, Mountain Evangelist Barnes, only he reverses the medical course. He can cure a man of rheumatism. With faith and sweet oil—that is, with a great deal of faith and very little sweet oil—he cured the rheumatism of Mr. Bunting, the superintendent of the Christian Home for Intemperate Men. But when he cured his rheumatism he gave him the gout, and, unfortunately, he is not, like his medical congener, "death on gout." Is it not time for the police to "run in" these miracle mongers?

We find this kind reference to the dead statesman of France in the current number of Father Phelan's Watchman:

> Gambetta is dead. All Paris is holding its nose. We will hold our tongue. The corpse is eloquent.

OUR MAIL POUCH.

As to Christian Communism.

St. Louis, January 5, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your notice of the Communist and one of its advertisements for a Christian communist wife I see that you are greatly in need of correct information on that subject. There are about 100 Protestant communities in this country, with a membership of over 5,000 persons, and all of them claim to be Christian communists. The Icarian Community in Southwestern Iowa is the only large community who are not Christians. And in none of these communities are the "wives reduced to the level of other property," because, very properly, they do not consider a wife to be property. Neither is there any Community now in existence wherein marriage is ignored except by celibacy. And I wish to correct your insinuation to the contrary by saying that the communism which the Communist advocates relates only to property and labor interests, and proposes no interference with the marriage relation.

Respectfully yours for truth and justice,
EDITOR OF THE COMMUNIST.

Another Barber's Opinion.

St. Louis, January 4, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I notice in your issue of the 4th inst. an article headed "Three Minute Shave." I will bet $50 (fifty dollars) that no barber in the city can shave a man and give him a satisfactory shave in three minutes. I will also bet the same amount that I have a man that can't be turned out of the chair in four minutes in good shape, and if Mr. Clements, Notin or any other barber thinks he can do it he can be accommodated with the above amount by answering this communication.

Respectfully yours,
A SUBSCRIBER.

P. S.—Please let us hear from those three-minute barbers in your issue of the Post-Dispatch.

The Fair Election.

St. Louis, January 5.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The time is at hand for the election of officers in the Fair Association. It is to be hoped that Charles Green is not to be allowed to have the whole thing to himself, but that the stockholders other than Mr. Green may have a chance to vote. Is there not to be an opposition ticket to allow at least of a protest by the stockholders? Yours very truly, STOCKHOLDER.

[As Mr. Green comes very near owning the Fair himself we do not see why he should not be permitted to run it according to his own notions.—Ed. P.-D.]

Cheap Divorce.

St. Louis, January 4, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Is there a law where a man can obtain a divorce by paying the Circuit Court $10? If so, please answer immediately.
READER.

[There is no place on the face of the earth, that we know of, where divorces can be procured so cheaply. Certainly not St. Louis. The lawyers would not permit it. A reasonably cheap divorce can be obtained in Indianapolis, but the railroad fare from here is an item, of course.—Ed. P.-D.]

Hapi New Year.

Better than Mining.

From the Denver Tribune.

As a rule the servant girls of Denver are rapidly becoming the owners of houses and lots. They get good pay, don't have to spend it for dress, and consequently have a surplus to invest. An industrious girl can save enough in a year to buy a lot near a street car line. Fortune-hunters are getting hold of this state of facts, and are sometimes found paying their addresses to the kitchen rather than to the parlor.

Where to Begin.

From the Kansas City Times.

A strong prohibition element has manifested itself already in Jefferson City. There is no place where an element of this description is more needed. A temperance experiment at the Madison House, by way of practical illustration, would have great effect on the people.

St. John's Lecture.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Gov. St. John, of Kansas, it is reported, will soon start out on an extended lecturing tour. His subject is not announced, but it may be assumed that it will be "How to Fritter Away Majorities," as he evidently knows more on this question than any other.

Wasted Wisdom.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

This is the time of year to write columns of advice to the Legislature; but as the Legislatures do not profit by advice, the space may as well be taken up with able reports of dog-fights and runaways.

In Luck.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

More Democratic office-holders began to reap the fruition of their labors on the 1st than have tasted the joys of office in any one year since the war.

Cheap Fun.

From the Kansas City Times.

It costs only $5 to slap a St. Louis reporter's face and rip up his clothes with a knife. They believe in ventilating the press down in St. Louis.

How to Abate the Tramp Nuisance.

A HORRIBLE SUSPICION.

The Circumstances Surrounding the Death of Little Gracie Miller.

This morning Coroner Nidelet began the investigation into the circumstances of the death of a little girl named Gracie Miller, which, in the opinion of some of the interested parties, is suspicious. The circumstances that throw a suspicious light on the case are as follows: The child, which was only four years of age, died at noon last Wednesday, at No. 2707 Caroline street, the home of the child's father, Baxter D. Miller, and its paternal grandfather. The mother of the child, who was separated from her husband, is Mrs. Mamie Miller, who now lives with her father, Mathew Gilmore, at No. 2601 Thomas street. When the couple separated, two months ago, it was agreed that the mother should take charge of the child, but the father should see the little girl whenever he desired. On Christmas day the child was sent with a messenger to Mr. Miller's house on Caroline street, and was detained there. The mother is employed in a Franklin avenue store, and a few days ago filed a suit for a divorce, and also made application for a writ of habeas corpus which was granted and made returnable yesterday. On Tuesday the child was taken with a spasm while at dinner. Dr. Richard J. Leonard was called in to attend Gracie, who recovered, but on Wednesday morning was seized with another spasm. The physician was again called in, but the child died about noon. Mr. Gilmore was notified and went with Mr. Miller to obtain a burial certificate. Dr. Leonard, without stating his reasons or suspicions, refused to give a certificate until the case was investigated by the Coroner. The facts were brought to the attention of that officer, who said he had no official notice of the case and asked that Dr. Leonard or Dr. Johnson, the family physician, make an examination of the contents of the stomach. Both the physicians refused to do this; and last night the police regularly reported the case to Dr. Nidelet, who took the matter in hand and began the investigation. None of the interested parties will announce their suspicions, which it appears are that the child was poisoned so that the mother could not obtain possession, to which the writ granted by Judge Lindley, entitled her. Dr. Leonard refuses to make any statement until called upon by the Coroner. The above presentation of the facts is made by the child's father.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Burglars forced an entrance to the residence of Thomas Wall in the Third Ward last night, securing about $10 in currency and a quantity of clothing valued at $20.

A horse attached to a spring wagon ran away near the stock yards yesterday afternoon, colliding with a large stone and throwing the driver to the street. An axle of the wagon was broken and the driver severely bruised about the head.

The motion by Mr. Bowman to dismiss a civil case because the attorney bringing the suit was not a member of the Illinois bar was argued at length before Judge Launtz, in the City Court, this morning. The attorneys devoted most of the time to personal attacks and consumed the morning session. The decision was not rendered at noon, but it is understood the motion will be overruled. Several St. Louis attorneys were in attendance and are deeply interested, for should the decision of the Judge sustain Bowman their practice comes to an end in East St. Louis.

A Charity Performance.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association, under the high-sounding title of "Her Majesty's Haymarket Minstrel Combination," furnished an excellent entertainment last evening at the Pickwick for the benefit of the Hebrew Free School and the Relief Association. Several well known talented amateurs contributed to the programme, Messrs. Joe Goldsmith, C. H. and Wittenberg, Charles Katzenberg, A. Heyman, Sam Friede, M. Harris, J. Rothschild, R. Singer, Julius Suss and others. The entertainment was directed by Mr. Goldsmith and Prof. Florence directed the musical arrangements. Signor Blitz, Jr., furnished a few interesting features of illusion. There was a large attendance and a handsome sum was realized for the charities.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

An Effort to be Made to Establish Them.

Congressman Hill Explains the Advantages of the System--The Growth in England and Canada.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Washington, January 5.—Now that Congress has decided to accept a reduced rate of postage—for there seems to be no doubt that the Senate will concur in the action of the House in this regard—the friends of the British system of Post-offices are beginning to urge other features of that organization. Postal savings banks are now receiving a good deal of attention, and an effort is to be made to incorporate them into our system. Whether the present Congress will get time to undertake action on this subject is not known, but it is certainly to be agitated at a very early day. New England will probably oppose it. Her savings bank system is so thoroughly and satisfactorily organized that it not only commends itself to the New England mind, but it is also a power in the land and will make it lively for any New England Congressman who would advocate the system of savings banks as a part of the Post-office system. The Middle States, however, see the need of it, and the Western and Southern men would favor it. Representative Hill, of New Jersey, speaking of the English system a few days since to your correspondent, said he thought it had many excellent feautures, some of which might well be adopted here.

"The Savings Bank system," he said, "is growing of great value to the people—the common people—there. Why they go into the Post-office there and, besides mailing their letter for a penny, they may turn to one desk and deposit their earnings in a way in which they will be actually and positively safe, and at another desk they may send telegrams to almost any point without difficulty or delay."

"Does the combination of letter-sending, banking and telegraphing seem to give satisfaction to the people there?"

"Yes, indeed. The growth of the business is the best proof of that. I haven't the figures at hand, but they are something enormous—showing a ten-fold increase in both branches."

"Do you think the telegraphic system should be taken under control of the Government in this country and made a part of the Post-office Department as it is in England?"

"I wouldn't like to say that. It would doubtless be a good thing in many respects, yet in others I fear it might not. It would doubtless reduce the cost of telegraphing to a minimum, and would increase the use of the telegraph lines of the country greatly, but it would add a very large number of men to the list of Government employes, and would in that regard be a dangerous undertaking."

"But as to the postal savings system?"

"I hope to see that made a part of our post-office system, so that every man, woman and child, no matter where located, may have an absolutely safe place of depositing his or her earnings and accumulations, no matter how little."

Some interesting facts have recently been given the public regarding the postal savings bank system of Canada. The number of deposits received during the past year were 97,380, and the amount $6,485,989, while the number of withdrawals were 35,859 and the amount $3,161,619. The business of 1882, compared with the preceding year, shows an increase of 25,633 deposits and $2,260,947 in the sum deposited.

The following statement shows the growth of the Post-office savings system in Canada since its organization:

	Accounts.	Deposits.	Average Deposit.
1869	7,212	$ 856,814	$118 80
1874	24,968	3,204,965	128 30
1878	25,535	2,754,184	107 80
1881	39,605	6,208,226	156 70
1882	51,463	9,473,601	184 00

THE ARRESTED MAIL CLERK.

B. Falkenhainer's Curious Connection With Prof. Richter—The Kansas City Lady.

Berthold Falkenhainer, the transfer mail clerk at the Union Depot, arrested on Wednesday by Inspector Dice, of the Postal Department, for embezzling a packet of Louisville letters, furnished bail in the sum required by U. S. Commissioner Cullen, $2,500, with Tony Faust and J. M. Warde, of the Grand Central Hotel, for sureties. His case will come before the United States District Court. Falkenhainer is wellknown in German circles and is a member of one or two societies. At one time he ran for a seat in the Council, depending upon the German vote in his ward. He obtained the promise of a large vote in the caucus, but at the nomination he was badly left. In a summer of 1881 he was mixed up in a scandal which involved a correspondence carried on in the name of a friend, and a neat plan for flirtation with a young girl from Kansas City, who was induced to come here. The story was well ventilated at the time, and it elicited a published statement from Falkenhainer. Prof. Richter, who taught music at the Beethoven Conservatory, was an acquaintance of Falkenhainer's, and was prevailed upon to remove to St. Louis from Kansas City, where he had a young lady pupil who was anxious to secure a position here. One day he met her on the street here and was surprised to hear her say that she came by appointment to meet him. He denied it, and the young girl said that she could produce letters bearing his name. His mail was always addressed to Falkenhainer's care.

MR. RICHTER STATED

that Falkenhainer one day read one of the young lady's letters, and he presumed that his romantic notions led him to carry on a correspondence with her, using his, Richter's, name. Falkenhainer had secured him the musical directorship at the Germania Club, and the friendship between them was very strong until Falkenhainer became infatuated with the young girl correspondent at Kansas City. From that time on there was a coolness between them. The girl came here at the request of the party with whom she was corresponding, and was quickly undeceived when she met Mr. Richter. When Richter's statement was given to the public Falkenhainer was spending his vacation at White Bear Lake, Minnesota. A few days later he published a card to the effect that he had never corresponded with the young girl in Kansas City; that he had not used Richter's name for that or any other purpose; that the letters could not be produced, and that the whole story was a put-up job on him. He became dissatisfied with Mr. Richter, he stated, because it was through his influence that he, Richter, secured prominence in musical circles here, but that he had failed to recognize all the good that Falkenhainer had done for him, financially and otherwise. In any case the young girl was a victim of somebody's deception, and the matter has never been satisfactorily cleared up.

A Missing Boy.

John Wray, a colored boy eight years of age, is missing from his home, No. 1316 Morgan street. The case has been reported to the police by the boy's parents, who fear that he has been kidnapped. The little fellow is described as being very black, with large eyes and prominent lips. He wore a cap, dark coat, gray stockings and good shoes. He was last seen playing on the street near his home.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

What Is Said Concerning the Governor's Message.

roposed Legislation--The Committees--St. Louis Judges of Election--Gossip From Jefferson City.

rom Our Staff Correspondent.

JEFFERSON CITY, January 4.—Owing to he fact that the Senate adjourned until to-orrow morning at 10 o'clock after the rning session to-day, the message of the overnor, of which I sent you a fair abstract y telegraph, was not delivered to the Assembly this afternoon. To-morrow morning t 10 o'clock is the hour set for the reading f the document. The only copies of it that ave been distributed, so far, are the advance sheets prepared for the press. A ew members have been apprised of the contents of the instrument by their newspaper riends. These have talked of it, and, as a onsequence, it is the principal subject discussed to-night. There is nothing remarkable in the recommendations. One might lmost be tempted to say that they are a job ot. The opening, descriptive of the order nd prosperity that prevails throughout the tate, is abundant with those highly-rhetorical expressions that have given the Governor something of a literary reputation. Never did a Governor of Missouri pardon a convicted criminal as gracefully as does the esent executive, and all his published instruments bear the same attractive outlines—speaking of course from a literary standpoint. Passing over the feature the message devoted to the financial condition of the State, assuming that it exhibits e usual happy state of affairs, leaving the estion of State claims against the Government to the consideration of the individuals terested, and sharing the Governor's hope at some day the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad will not be the biennial subject of ecommendation and the occasion for legislation, the general reader will eruse with interest all that is said der the caption of outlawry. The ease ith which the subject of the killing of Jesse ames is disposed of will attract some attention. The date on which Jesse climbed the olden stair under the auspices of the Ford hildren is given with the facts that they rrendered, that they were indicted for urder, pleaded guilty "and were pardoned me on the same day upon grounds of blic policy." That is all he says. No argument of justification, no recountal details. He considered it "public-policy," nd, as one of his admirers said to-night, "that is what he said, and he will stick to it." he officers of the law who were engaged in he robber hunt are duly recognized, and here is almost a vein of humor running hrough the recital of how, after the snake ad been scotched, several bands of amateurs n various sections of the State made little emonstrations which were met either by the hotgun or by prompt capture and peedy conviction. The Governor takes reat satisfaction in the reflection that Missouri can no longer be called the "Robber tate," except by some man who desires to illfully lie. The subject of "revenue" is so ecorated with statistics and appalling ables that all but holders of Missouri securities will pass on to the section in which he figures presented show that in 1881 the stitution earned $1,262 64 more than it ost.

THE PENITENTIARY IS DISCUSSED.

"This sum of $1,262 64 is exclusively the excess of the receipts over that of expenditures r the daily expenses of the prison for 1881, nd is wholly independent of the loss sustained by the destructive fire which occurred here on the night of the 11th of May, 1881, n account of which loss is given below.

"Although the loss sustained by the State consequence of the fire in May, 1881, was rge, and notwithstanding the cost of living n the latter part of 1881, in consequence of e drought of 1881, was greater than in rmer years, yet the management of the rison was so frugal and judicious that the xcess of the maintenance and repairs consequent by loss by fire over the receipts were nly $8,099 85, while those of the earnings one over the cost of maintenance were $6,-8 44. These figures present an irrefutable nswer to the idle charges of extravagance nd carelessness made by inconsiderate men gainst the Warden."

A tabulated statement shows the loss by he fire to have been $34,544 55. In arguing ainst the continuance of life sentence from e basis of the theory that 14 years is the aximum of prison life, the Governor quotes oratio Seymour, and delivers an essay on e prison problem that Linda Gilbert should ad. The matter of inequality of sentences one that has interested him ever since he me into office. He does not believe that man should be sent to the Penitentiary for 15 years for stealing horse, and another only for two years for bbing a safe. He protests against the confinement of youth, under twenty in the Penitentiary, and W. P. Bentley who has drawn a bill creating a reform school for the re of youthful felons, anticipates his earnest support. Bentley's bill contemplates the tablishment of a farm such as is maintained in the Eastern States, to be under the ontrol of a board of nine curators, one om St. Louis, one from Kansas City, four from north of the ver and three from the south, they to be lected by the Legislature.

The interesting fact is brought out that the dministration of justice in Missouri has cost uring the two years $297,270 70. Some counties in Missouri do not send up revenue enough to pay the salary of their member of the Legislature and the Judge of the ircuit Court. Take Ripley county, for instance. The boys in playing pool up here ways call the "one ball" Ripley.

The review of the condition of the St. institutions, educational and eleemosynary, admits that all of em stand in need of increased appropriations. The present Legislature contains any warm friends of the State University d the normal schools, and the proposition create a permanent endowment fund for State University will, in the judgment of e of the older members, go through without serious opposition.

In recommending the establishment of

A STATE BOARD OF HEALTH,

v. Crittenden has done what Gov. Phelps clined to do. Two bills proposing this ard have been defeated in four years. ere are many country doctors o have few ideas beyond "number six" and "number nine," and y have their influence. The recommendation for Supreme Court relief has already n reflected in a half dozen bills awaiting roduction by their authors. Mr. Bentley l, at the first opportunity, present an act ich contemplates the creation of a commission of five members: one from St. Louis, from Kansas City, and three from the te. They are to meet at Jefferson City consider the arrears document. They l write their opinions and submit them to Supreme Court, which, if it approves m, will have them recorded as their own. s understood that the present Supreme rt would sustain the constitutionality of s measure should the question be raised. ge Harry Lander, of Lynn, proposes as elief that the laws be so amended that the er courts only certify up to the Supreme rt the questions of law at issue instead of voluminous records of a thousand pages, of which must be read. This is a very d scheme, and its author only claims for that it will cut the Gordian knot. The boom given the Governor is appreciated by the ends of the citizen soldiery, who will be rprised if they do not get the $25,000 they intend to demand. It was thought that the Governor would recommend a very liberal appropriation in aid of immigration. He spoke very kindly of the progress of the movements, official and volunteer, in this direction, but is not as forcible as Morrison Renshaw would be if given the Governor's opportunity.

THE MILITIA MOVEMENT

The necessity of making clearer the laws, and extending the authority of the coal oil inspectors, is conceded by all, and the recommendations in this particular will be promptly met. Gran. Atkins, the St. Joseph Inspector, is on the ground, and has a bill dividing the State into three coal oil districts, which he assures the members will throttle the Standard Oil Company monopoly, and forever destroy the "Consolidated Tank Line."

The resignation of Labor Commissioner Spaunhorst, coming, as it does, after the favorable manner in which the Governor received his report, surprised the members. Representative Carroll, of St. Louis, is at the head of a movement which designs making the Labor Bureau one of usefulness.

SCARING THE MAYOR.

Senator O'Brien has prepared a bill giving to the Recorder of Voters the power to appoint judges and clerks of election. He has also a measure that contemplates the election of Police Justice and City Attorney. Another of O'Brien's measures, if successful, will put an end to the outrageous rates of interest charged by those brokers who lend money on furniture.

The St. Louis delegation has been organized, with Henry T. Kent as chairman. The question of the clerkship has been left open for Thomas Morris, the old factotum of the delegation. Ketchum's doom has been sealed; the members consider him too much of a statesman to be a clerk.

It is probable that the House will adjourn to-morrow until next Tuesday. Monday is Jackson Day, and no true Democrat can work on the glorious anniversary of the battle of New Orleans.

The Republicans have been invited by the Speaker of the House to nominate members for places on the committees and have made the following selections:

Constitutional Amendments, McGinness, of St. Louis.
Judiciary, McGinness, of St. Louis.
Roads and Highways, Van Nate, of Caldwell.
Mines and Mining, Schaaber, of Jasper.
Banks and Corporations, Wade, of Green.
Criminal Jurisprudence, Harrington, of Adair.
Township Organization, Van Note.
Library, Whitmer, of Holt.
Penitentiary, Wade, of Green.
Justice of Peace, Renfrow, of Polk.

ON THE RIO GRANDE.

Life in the Old-Style Town of Laredo—Mexican Gamblers.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LAREDO, January 1.—Laredo, on the American side of the Rio Grande, like El Paso, is one of those wonderful creations of this age of steam, electricity and "booms." Like El Paso, too, it has its vis-a-vis. Nueva Laredo, on the Mexican side of the river, with this difference, however, that Nueva Laredo is, as its name would indicate, a new town, while Laredo proper is the old, historical city, built hundreds of years ago. "The two Laredos," then, let the reader fully understand, are Mexican towns in the fullest sense of the term, and it is only since the advent of railways that American progress, enterprise and industry have brought them at all prominently before the world. Any one who has never visited old Mexico can form no idea of its towns, cities, people and customs. Everything is so unlike the civilization of the nineteenth century that one is almost tempted to imagine the so-called civilization of the Aztec race a myth. The buildings—those of Mexican architecture—are of adobe, or sun-dried bricks, are never more than one story in height and are generally built in the form of a hollow square, with two entrances, one for animals and vehicles and one for the human inhabitants. My hotel—the Laredo Hotel—will serve as a fair illustration of the average dwelling of the more pretentious Mexican throughout the Republic. It is a low, one-story adobe building built in the form of a square and occupying about one-quarter of an ordinary block of ground. The rooms are situated all around the square or courtyard formed by the walls, with the door opening on the square. A shed, or awning, of lumber, runs all around the inside of the court, affording shelter from the sun as well as the rain, when either would render crossing the courtyard undesirable. The floors are all of brick, which are scrupulously scrubbed and dried each morning and actually present a clean, tidy appearance. Of course, such a thing as comfort is impossible under the above described circumstances, but the Mexican cares very little for that, particularly if it costs anything in the shape of labor to obtain it.

Just now all Mexico is alive with excitement and gala day joys, for the fiesta season is at its height. Like the Italian, Portuguese, Spaniard and other Latin races, the Mexican is never happy unless enjoying himself, and the slightest pretext serves to secure a holiday. What the Mardi Gras and carnivals of other nations are to them the fiesta season is to the Mexican, and that he fully enjoys himself I am thoroughly convinced. The fiestas or national holidays began about two weeks ago and will continue some two weeks longer. In company with a friend I sallied out last evening to visit the scenes of festivity and general jolilfication, and shall attempt a description of what I saw during one night's short ramble through the streets and plazas of a typical Mexican city. The night was dark and gloomy, and the streets of Laredo are guiltless of gas or any other illuminator; so we were forced to feel our way carefully along the walls and to walk slowly because of the numerous pitfalls which abound, for know, dear reader, that sidewalks wider than two feet—and scarce at that—are totally unknown in Mexico. But the Mexican is patient and humble in his aspirations; he prowls around at night so much that he sees equally as well in the dark as at mid-day; he needs no sidewalks, asphaltum or granite pavements. The sand of his native heath is good enough for him, and less trying to his unshod, or sometimes sandal-shod, feet. The newspapers of Mexico too do not have leaders on the execrable condition of the streets and the duties of the Mayor, City Council and Street Commissioners, and hence all are happy because of one mind, namely, that it was good enough for the fathers, and that improvement of any kind would be nothing less than rank heresy.

And so discussing these matters and anathematizing the sidewalks and Laredo's city fathers, we arrived upon the main plaza, where the fiesta was being held. I had expected a scene of semi-barbaric splendor, something like a chapter from the Arabian Nights, unusual, startling, glittering, grand, magnificent; but like all great expectations, the reality, as is always the case, did not begin to approach the ideal. Booths or stalls, both large and small, have been erected all around the plaza, in the form of the inevitable square, some tents and the rest of rough boards, hastily nailed up and all illuminated with candles, lamps, lanterns, Chinese lanterns, naptha burners, etc., etc. Upon entering we first behold a bar, an unusually long one, against which crowds a motley mob of Mexicans, cowboys, senoritas and even white women, all clamoring for their favorite beverage, a drinking, shouting, howling, as yet good-natured mob, the most picturesque imaginable. Next we come upon a fakir offering in stentorian tones a genuine one hundred and fifty dollar gold watch and chain for fifty cents—provided you show the right number of spots with dice, a feat as yet unaccomplished so far as the sucker is concerned, for know all men by these presents that the dice are loaded. The fellow picks up an incredible quantity of halves, however, although each one is accompanied with a hearty malediction, a circumstance that does not seem to trouble the fakir in the least. Here is a wheel of fortune, a veritable "bonanza" to—the fellow behind the table. An eager, excited, good-natured crowd of men, women, boys, girls, and even children jam and push each other in their efforts to reach the table with the magic numbers. The wheel turns, the bets are made, the croupier calls out the result in English and Spanish, the loser sees his coin disappear, the winner is made happy, and the scene is repeated. Very frequently as high as $1,000 is lost in one night by one single individual at this diabolical game of barefaced, shameless swindling. I noticed one woman, a Mexican, who played persistently for half an hour, and who lost some twenty dollars, and at last retired with her bueno hombre, and just twenty-five cents, with which they purchased two drinks of liquid lightning and then stole silently away.

Then we visited the games of monte, chuck-a-luck, craps, faro, roulette, and the thousand and one other games which are here played openly, and at which it seems all play. When I say all, I mean it literally, as not only does the half-civilized Mexican of the lower order gamble as long as he can raise a nickel, but the better classes as well. Both white and Castilian can be seen at any time indulging in their favorite vice.

All the games are run by—I blush to write it—Americans, and a viler, more villainous-looking set never defiled the earth. The very outcasts of outcasts, the pariahs of the gambling fraternity, are the keepers of games at the Mexican fietas. The pitiful quilro piso of the miserable, ragged, blanketed Mexican, and the only coin he has in the world, disappears before the wiles of the skin gambler as nimbly as the dollar of the millionaire cow-man, a class who seem to regard it as a sign of aristocracy and blue blood to recklessly fling away a thousand or so on a notoriously hard game.

Such is one feature of the fiesta, and, perhaps, the brightest. The dance-house, the cock-pit and bull-fight are all far worse, and words would fail to describe scenes too vile for human eyes to look upon. And this orgie lasts for four weeks, long enough to rob the miserable simple Mexican of his last pesada, and to be the cause of countless murders, suicides and bankrupteies. Once upon a time, I learn—but that was before the gringo came—the fiestas were actually seasons of gaiety, mirth and innocent amusement, in which all took part, and an honorable one, but now, instead of fiesta, which means joy, it should be termed the feast of the human hyena, the American skin gambler. As to virtue among the women of this degraded people, it is totally unknown. And yet the old men say it was once not so—before the gringo came.

Is it not a sad commentary on our boasted civilization, that we corrupt instead of elevate every inferior race with which we come in contact.

To sum up the joys of last night's fiesta, this morning sees thirteen descendants of Montezuma languishing behind the prison bars for various crimes, ranging from theft to wife murder. The other side of the river comes to the front with nearly the same roster, and yet to-night will be but a duplicate of the last, perhaps worse.

This is a truthful picture of life on the Rio Grande to-day. But, the reader will ask, are there no redeeming features, nothing bright, beautiful, good and agreeable at Laredo? Oh, yes, much; but that will be spoken of in my next. SARDONYX.

THE VULCAN STRIKE.

December Pay-Day Near at Hand and the Workmen Happy.

No Efforts Made by Either Side for a Compromise--Over Fifteen Hundred Men Idle--The Situation as Viewed by the Men.

The strike at the Vulcan paralyzes business in Carondelet. The situation was well explained in a conversation which ensued between a bartender and one of his patrons this morning:

"It looks as though everything was on a strike down here. Even the pool-table looks as though it had quit business, and the cues are on a strike, too, for there isn't a tip left on one of them. Why don't you have that table recovered and the cues retipped?"

"The table and the cues are good enough for these times," said the bar-tender, "and I'm not going to spend a cent till I see how this thing is going to end."

"God knows when that will be," said his patron.

"I can't help that," said the bar-tender.

Affairs are indeed in statu quo. In the mill, where some fifteen hundred workmen are generally to be found busy as bees, there was not a hundred to be seen this morning. The pattern-makers, numbering a dozen or more, the foundrymen, to the number of twenty-five, and forty laborers were the only persons at work, and they were so scattered about the immense works that the whole place seemed deserted.

"Where are the workmen keeping themselves?" was the question asked of a dark-skinned laborer.

"You'll find 'em at home, sah, taking things easy," was the reply.

And he was about right, for while there were no clouds of smoke coming from the great chimneys of the Vulcan, every cottage chimney in sight told that there were comfortable fires within.

"Are the workmen suffering much from the strike?" was the question put a steel-worker.

"No," was the answer, "and they're not likely to suffer for a long while to come. A good many have put us down for a shiftless lot, but most of us own the houses we live in and have money stowed away to use in times like these. Besides that, the strike wouldn't hurt us for a month or two anyhow, for you see the company has always been a month or so behind with their pay, and we haven't as yet even received our December wages; so we have them to fall back on if nothing else."

"When do you get your December pay?"

"Next Saturday a week we expect it."

The men worked hard during December, and the pay-roll for that month will be a long one.

IT WILL TAKE OVER $100,000 to go around. The strikers feel considerably troubled over the reports that have gone out concerning their lawlessness.

"I think," said a steel worker, "that the men out on strike are quieter now than when they are working. When they are at work and get off for a day they sail in and have a boisterous time of it, but now they are off all the time and instead of running around as when off on a holiday they stop at home and take things easy."

"I find things a great deal quieter down here now," said Police Captain Price, "than when the men are at work. I can't explain the cause of this, but it is a fact. My men go along and attend to business as if there was nothing unusual going on."

THE MEN ON STRIKE

represent every department in the mill. There are heaters, helpers, chargers, rail hands, firemen, engineers, blacksmiths, gas-house men and laborers. There are bosses over every department, and, unlike most men holding like positions in other manufacturing establishments, they go out with the strikers every time. Indeed the bosses generally conduct the strike. They are nearly always found to be men of intelligence, who keep an eye on the markets, sum up the cost of rails, ore, coal, labor and water, and who know just about what wages ought to be paid the steel-workers.

THE HEATERS,

who hold the next important positions to the bosses, generally work with the latter in case of a strike or anything out of the usual rut. The bosses earn from $125 to $150 a month. The heaters get $3 50 for every 100 tons of iron they handle. A good heater will average 150 tons a day, for which he will receive $5 25. There are three grades of the first drawing $3 50, the second $2 50 and the third $2 25 per 100 tons. The chargers receive $3 30 a hundred. The laborers receive but $1 50 and $2 a day, while other workmen are paid in proportion to the responsibility of the positions they hold. This being the case, some of the workmen can stand the dead-lock better than others. But none of the men appear worried over the situation. Some of them are pretty long-sighted. One of them said this morning that the mill-owners had shut down for repairs, which it would take three months to complete, and while they were shut down they thought they would agitate the question of cutting down wages so as to get the men to come to the front when they got ready to start up at the very lowest rates.

"But," said this gentleman, "we won't stand anything of that kind and all the mill hands are with us in our determination. They wanted to cut our wages 33⅓ per cent. We were willing to accept a reduction of 20 per cent. on present rates for four months or twelve per cent. for one year, but we can't stand any more of a reduction than that."

"Have there been any conferences between you and the mill owners looking to a settlement of your difficulties?"

"No, and I suppose there won't be until the repairs at the mill are made. Then I suppose the owners will want us to go to work at their terms."

THE MEN CLAIM

that their demand is a reasonable one, and that the owners of every mill in the country are now paying the wages asked by the St. Louis workmen. The latter say that, rather than submit to the reduction offered, they will emigrate and take up their abode in Pittsburg, Chicago, or other points where the wages asked by them here are paid without controversy. Many of the strikers are young men who, having nothing to keep them here, can easily carry this into execution.

Superintendent Fry had not got to his pots at the Vulcan when a reporter called there this morning, and the clerk in charge refused to give the reporter a list of the men out of employment. He wanted the newsgatherer to wait two hours until the boss got around, but the reporter hadn't time and took a tramp through the works instead. The men who are busy repairing are not looked upon as "scabs," for the work they are doing has nothing to do with that of the strikers. No meetings will be held until next Thursday, and there will be no offers of compromise or anything else until then.

IRON AND STEEL.

The Extent of This Industry in the City of St. Louis.

The Age of Steel, in its annual review of the iron and steel industries of St. Louis, and such other industries as are incident thereto, publishes the result of personal visits made to 213 different establishments engaged in more than twenty different lines of business, and shows that there are more than 21-000 hands employed in them; that they do business on $23,287,000 invested capital, and that their product for 1882 amounted to $50,-297,000. The amount of pig-iron actually melted in St. Louis establishments during the year was 163,825 tons. Business is flourishing and the outlook good.

BREAKING THE ICE.

First Suicide This Year from the Big Bridge Railing.

At about 10 o'clock this morning an unknown man committed suicide by jumping from the bridge. There were several witnesses of the affair, and one of them, John Smith, foreman of the bridge laborers, made the following statement to a POST-DISPATCH reporter:

"We were working on the west of the middle pier this morning, when the man came along from the St. Louis side. He was evidently a laboring man of about 30 years of age, about five feet ten inches high, of light complexion and had a two weeks growth of beard upon his face. He wore a stiff-brimmed hat, striped calico shirt, black coat, dark jeans pants, shoes, but no vest. On his way east along the western pier he stopped once or twice to look into the river and when he had passed the west pier he stopped and looked over the south railing of the bridge, and seemed to be watching the cakes of ice floating underneath. Pretty nearly every one who crosses the bridge just now does the same thing, so that there was nothing in the man's actions to create surprise or suspicion. All of a sudden, without saying a word, he climbed the railing rapidly and jumped over. We were within a dozen feet of him at the time, but he was in the air before one of us could make a move. When I reached the railing and looked over the man was not visible. His body had cut through a cake of ice, making a clean-cut round hole in it, and had disappeared in the water beneath. His hat was floating on the water and remained there for some time. If the body came again to the surface it must have landed under the ice and thus remained concealed from view." This is the first bridge suicide of the new year, and is one of the most successful attempts at self-destruction ever accomplished at this popular resort for suicides.

The Place for Bargains.

The J. M. Ward Furniture Store and Carpet Company will have its grand opening to-morrow, Saturday. The company has secured the new and commodious stores at at Nos. 1111, 1113 and 1115 Franklin avenue, and have filled them with a magnificent stock of furniture, carpets, stoves, and everything needed for housekeeping.

This stock is all new and has been selected especially for the retail trade by men who have had long experience in the business. The great advantage of the supply of goods is the variety. Every article of a housekeeping outfit can be secured of any desired quality and at any price. Goods are sold for cash or on time payments. In either case the very bottom, bed-rock figures are given. The proprietors are willing to wager that no firm in the same line of business can undersell them or give the bargains which they will offer to customers. The public are invited to call, examine and satisfy themselves about this last statement. The store will be kept open until 9 o'clock each night to accommodate customers. Remember the address, the J. M. Ward Furniture Store and Carpet Company, 1111, 1113, and 1115 Franklin avenue, the place where housekeepers can secure every article they want at starvation prices.

$400,000.

The Deficit in the State Treasury of Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, January 5.—The Legislative committee appointed to investigate the office of the State Treasurer reported this morning that the Treasurer has been out of city two days, and his clerk is not prepared to make a statement of accounts. The committee report a deficit in the Treasdry of $400,000, and, after consultation with the bondsmen of the Treasurer, recommend the suspension of the business of his office for the present.

Paying for the Nickel Plate.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The Post says: It was rumored yesterday that the Lake Shore directors were considering a proposition to issue $6,000,000 bonds to pay for the "Nickel Plate" road. This was at first denied but repeated to-day. While there is as yet absolutely no means of knowing whether the Lake Shore is to pay for the Nickle Plate by the issue of bonds or not, it is at least presumable that bonds to and about that amount will necessarily be issued by some corporation for that purpose, and as the Nickel Plate has been presumably bought in Vanderbilt's interest and especially in the interest of the Lake Shore, to which the Nickel Plate is a close and parallel line, and now stands in the relation of second track, it is also fairly presumable that the bonds will be issued by the Lake Shore.

Grant as a Diner.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—Gen. Grant will dine with Senator Miller, of California, Monday, with the Secretary of State Tuesday and the President Wednesday. The Chinese Minister visited him to-day.

BELLEVILLE.

Mr. Walker, of the Belleville Republican sold his interest in that paper to Mr. F. Cumming, who will assume control of the local department.

About 7 o'clock this morning a large frame barn, situated near the Louisville and Nashville depot, took fire. The barn belonged to Nick Scheisslar and was valued at $200. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mr. Winkelmann started for Springfield last night to make a personal appeal to the Governor to commute the sentence of death passed on Philip Matthews to life imprisonment, and if failing in this will endeavor to have the execution postponed to allow the condemned time to prepare for death. The decisions of the Supreme Court had no apparent effect on the prisoner. At his request no reporters will be admitted to the jail till the day before the execution. Deputy Sheriff Ragland visited St. Louis yesterday to inspect the scaffold there and examine into the mode in which executions are carried out. The building of the scaffold will be started immediately in the yard adjoining the old jail and will be finished Thursday. Matthews at last realizes he must die and will devote the time intervening between now and the execution to his spiritual welfare.

LOVED TOO MUCH.

In Colorado Springs did dwell
Once on a time a dashing belle,
Whose name was Hannah Hunniwell.
A blooming, buxom lass was she,
And she was sweet as sweet could be—
So all the fellows did agree.
But Hannah Hunniwell was vain;
That fact, alas! was all too plain,
And caused her family much pain.
For Hannah laid uncommon stress
Upon the vanity of dress—
A weakness of her sex, we guess.
She had a lovely sealskin sacque
That often graced her comely back,
And sealed her doom at last, alack!
For when the wintry winds did blow,
Prognosticating ice and snow,
Unto her trunk did Hannah go,
And straight she hauled that sealskin out,
And, with premonitory flout,
She put the noisome moths to rout.

"Now blow, ye winds," quoth Hannah gay,
"So long as in my sacque I may Go gallivanting all the day!"
Alas, the poor, misguided child!
The sun appeared—the tempest wild
Was lulled into a zephyr mild.
Then Hannah waxed uncommon pale,
And wailed a great and grievous wail
To see her pet ambition fail.
Much to her family's dismay,
She stayed at home day after day,
And as she stayed she pined away.
And still the weather milder grew,
The gentle south wind balmy blew,
And warmed the people thro' and thro',
And while all other folks were glad,
Poor Hannah Hunniwell was sad—
Or, what was sadder yet, was mad.
And so one calm, soft eventide,
She pressed her sealskin to her side,
And, with a hollow sob, she died!

The chattering gossips love to tell
The fate of that vain, foolish belle
Who loved her sealskin sacque too well.

EUGENE FIELD.

WILLIAM'S OLD MOTHER.

BY M. QUAD.

William was wicked.

When I pick out one man from a mining camp made up of 300 runaways, debt-jumpers, cut-throats, gamblers, horse thieves and murderers, and call him wicked, I mean for the reader to infer that he was right up and down bad.

Which was exactly the case with William Tripp.

Nobody seemed to know when or how William had settled himself down in our midst. For all I know he was the founder of White Dog Diggings, and perhaps it was the rest of us who settled down in his midst. Be that as it may, he was there and there he remained, notwithstanding several broad hints that he would look handsome at the end of a rope.

Wicked! Well, he was that.

Such a swearer as William was! He would begin as soon as his eyes were opened in the morning, and keep up a steady fire until 10 o'clock at night. He spent more time in inventing new oaths than some of the men did in digging for gold. He swore by the heavens and earth—angels—whales—sharks—wildcats—pirates—preachers—and even pork and beans. I think his greatest anxiety was to find something new to swear by—but he found enough to make any man's flesh creep.

And he was a cheat and a liar.

There wasn't a man in camp who would believe him under oath, and no man ever played cards with him and escaped his knavish devices. He was quarrelsome, overbearing, hasty and inclined to shed blood, and, though shot at a dozen times, he always escaped without a scratch.

You wonder that we didn't run him out or hang him.

Well, somehow we always intended to, but always put it off to a more convenient date. The success of bouncing a man depends a good deal on who the man is. On our first gentle hint to William Tripp that unless he was packed up and out of camp inside of thirty minutes his anatomy would be riddled with bullets, he produced a couple of revolvers, backed up against the Red Eye Saloon, and calmly observed that he was aching for a little excitement. I think his actions at that particular time had something to do with our giving him rope and seeking to get along with his eccentric traits of character.

"I move," said Elder Beacon one night when we were talking about William's bad ways, "that the committee get the drop on him, and then run him into the hills."

Just so; but who were the committee? That was another point we could never satisfactorily determine, and that was another reason why William continued to abide with us.

Shoot! Well, you never saw such an eye and such nerve. Just as far as he could see the bowl of a pipe in a man's mouth, he could smash it with a bullet. Almost every hat in camp had an air-hole made by one of his bullets, and though I was prejudiced against William I had to admit that he respected men's heads in shooting at their hats. No doubt he would have felt real bad had his bullet carried too low.

One day when a sort of parson came over from Turkey Creek to wrestle with William and entreat him to flee from the wrath to come, what happened? Why, William backed off fifteen paces and cut every button off the parson's coat with bullets, and as a grand wind-up he made a long shot after the flying victim and left his mark on the man's ear in order to know him again.

But there came a halt in William Tripp's mad career, and it happened in a curious way. A fire in his tent one night burned up a lot of his traps, and he had to make a ride of thirty miles on Col. Cooper's old mare to replace with new. The morning he rode out of camp was the last time we saw him, but we heard from a dozen different ones just what happened him.

About twelve miles from our camp was the Overland Trail, and just where our own trail struck it was a pretty little valley with plenty of water and wood. It was a favorite camping spot with immigrants, and the day William Tripp reached it he found half a dozen wagons and as many families halted for a breathing spell.

The deviltry in William's nature bubbled over when he struck that valley and beheld such a scene of peace. Children were playing around, women were washing and mending, and the brawny men were repairing wagons and harness and whistling over their work. William drew rein and gazed upon the scene for a few minutes. Then he out with his revolver. Seated before one of the tents was an old woman with her knitting in her hand and a pipe in her mouth. It was a long shot, but the Evil One urged William to try it, and try it he did.

What happened?

Something even worse than murder. The bullet went straight for the old woman's head and crashed into her brain. Then something awful followed. She rose to her feet, whirled around to face the shooter, and, true as you live, she seemed to look at him for thirty seconds before she tottered forward and shrieked out:

"William! Oh! my son William!"

Then she pitched forward on the grass and was dead in a second, and the red blood oozed out and made a terrible stain on the green grass.

And William—what did he do? He was like one turned to stone. The woman's words plainly reached his ears, and he must have recognized her face. In the one awful moment in which he sat gazing at the corpse on the grass, it must have flashed across him that that his poor old mother had made that long journey with neighbors for no other purpose than to hunt him up—he, the boy who had left her years before and had been the subject of her nightly prayers ever since. Wicked as he was he must have felt her devotion and sacrifices.

And then?

He sat there in the saddle, his eyes fastened on his mother's corpse, and the revolver still in his hand. The situation had petrified him. While he sat thus one of the immigrants, who believed that the camp was to be attacked by a force, leveled his rifle over the wheel of a wagon and sent a bullet plowing through William's heart.

Ah! well; it's years and years ago, and the twin graves in the valley have long since been trampled out of sight, and White Dog Diggings can be found no more, but the day the news of that awful tragedy came back to us we dropped spade and pick and could work no more for the day. And after a long period of silence among the men, who had instinctively gathered around Judge Desire to hear his opinion, the Judge arose and said:

"Feller citizens, the wicked don't live out half his days, and don't you forgit it!"

GAMBETTA'S MISTRESS.

Madame de Beaumont a Kinswoman of Marshal MacMahon.

From the Philadelphia Press.

His amours, too, picturesquely detailed in the most piquant epigrams and untranslatable double entendres, were the topics of the town. He was no longer seen in the Latin Quarter cabarets, with the modest grisettes of his youth. The descendant of one of the most princely houses of France, a kinswoman of Marshal MacMahon through the proud Duke de Castries, gloried in a public liaison with the democratic Autochthon. The relations of this kinswoman with Gambetta intensified the hatred of Marshal MacMahon against the democratic leader, and this was the real animus of the attempt to hold him to account for the famous expression, "Marshal MacMahon must submit to the will of France or resign." (Il faut se soumettre ou de mettre.) The gossip and scandal filled all the boulevard journals. It was a revival of Mirabeau in all the excesses of revolutionary free morals. For the moment the press was divided between the orgies of Prince Plon-Plon in his Japanese villa in the Rue de Marigny and the Noctes Ambrosianæ of the parvenu voluptuary—whose seraglio fronted the Prince's on the same embowered square over on the banks of the Seine in the most secluded retreat of the Champs Elysees quarter. The name of Mme. de Beaumont was as conspicuous in the clubs, cafes and scandal-mongering saloons as ever was Pompadour or Montespan. But to a man upon whose shoulders supreme power had been lightly borne, in whose hands the burden of limitless death had rested, and over whose head gutters of calumny had passed harmlessly, the indulgence of any excess of the master passion brought no serious reproach. It is la mode in France, where marital fidelity is a sign of imbecility and inconstancy the measure of manliness. In the pavilion on the Rue de Marigny and in the villa at Avray, Gambetta found surcease from the burdens and cares of life in the sensuous relaxation of love, music and luxurious riot—much as Horace described in the decadence of Roman austerity.

ANTHRACITE COAL.

Rapid Exhaustion of the Limited Fields.

From the New York Mail and Express.

There are but four anthracite coal-fields in Pennsylvania, and their aggregate area is but 483 square miles. Reliable engineers estimate that the amount of coal the four fields will yield, if the present wasteful method of mining be continued, cannot be more than three billion tons. But the year which ends with the present week has taken 29,500,000 tons of anthracite coal from Pennsylvania mines, and it is expected that the amount taken will be greater, rather than less, in future years, so that the supply will be exhausted in a century, if not sooner. Besides Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Virginia are the only States which produce anthracite coal, and their supply is insignificant. The service performed by anthracite coal in the development of the resources of the United States has been so great that the prospect of the exhaustion of the supply, even a century hence, must be regarded with much concern. The declaration that long before the century ends anthracite coal will be a luxury which only the rich can enjoy, will cause a popular demand that the wasteful method of mining known as the "pillar and breast" be abandoned, and that the more economical method employed in English mines be substituted for it.

It is true that the supply of bituminous coal seems inexhaustible, although the annual product of our bituminous mines does not much exceed 42,000,000 tons, which is about one-fourth of the coal product in England. Ohio, which ranks below Pennsylvania and Illinois in the production of bituminous coal, can produce more than England, whose capacity is already severely taxed. But the iron and steel industries of the United States could never have reached their present proportions but for anthracite coal, and the exhaustion of the anthracite fields will inevitably affect the prosperity of the country, unless inventive genius devises a new fuel to feed our blast furnaces and move our engines—a contingency so remote that the gravest considerations remain to urge economy in anthracite coal.

Thackeray on Jackson's Statue.

Washington Cor. of the Boston Traveler.

Sumner and Thackeray were coming across Lafayette square, and the Massachusetts Senator was doing his best to get the attention of the novelist, so that he would not observe the rather peculiar equestrian statue of Andrew Jackson, which has been the wonder and the delight of the small boy for many years. As they approached Sumner redoubled his conversation, but without avail, for just opposite the "ornament" Thackeray stopped short and, looking all around him, said, in his peculiar quizzing tone, "Sumner, what have they done with the rockers?" Those who have seen this statue and have observed its close resemblance to a toy rocking-horse will appreciate the satire.

How natural it is to be suspicious. Truly this is an age of suspicion. Nevertheless, Capt. F. M. Howes, of the steamer William Crane, Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Line, between Boston and Baltimore, who suffered severely from rheumatism, caused by the exposure incident to his profession, was cured by St. Jacobs Oil. This is no suspicion.

Indians Trying to Protect the Buffalo

From the Montana Independent.

A Poplar Creek dispatch says that the Yanktons, under the leadership of their chief, Black Catfish, have seized and confiscated the property of seven white hunters whom they found unting on their reservation. The hunters were left on foot on the prairie. Over 1,000 white hunters are following the buffalo in the territory lying between Dry Fork and the Musselshell Creek, south of the Missouri, and in consequence buffaloes are becoming scarce in the vicinity. Unless the buffaloes should soon cross to the south side, many of the hunters will crowd on this reserve, which Chief Catfish has sworn to protect.

The Cost of Cigars.

From Music and Drama.

This was a club dialogue and its sequel: Q. What are you smoking! A. An imported Havana. Q. How much does it cost? A. A quarter. Q. How many do you smoke a day? A. Half a dozen. Q. How long have you smoked? A. Thirty years. Advice—My friend, with that amount of money you could have bought a house on Fifth avenue. The parties quitted the Brunswick and strolled up town. As they came near the Windsor, the smoker asked: Q. You never smoke? A. Never. Sarcastic query—Then point out your house.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

Prof. Spencer and the Grievances Against Him—Card from Dr. Laws.

COLUMBIA, MO., December 23, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your paper of December 18th, page 4, column 3, a statement of class-room grievances is laid before your readers. The editorial setting might almost be taken as a humorous pleasantry, and yet there is a measure of seriousness in the publication that seems to call for something of the nature of this communication.

Prof. Spencer has been with us only a few months. He is a young man who has on the score of actual work acquired an enviable reputation and recognition abroad as well as among leading scientists in America for one of his years. He has had six years of successful experience in teaching and he is a graduate of eight years' standing, having graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Applied Science, at the head of his class, 1874, from McGill University, Montreal, of which Dr. J. W. Dawson, of world-wide reputation, is now and was then president. He was subsequently an officer in the Canada Geological Survey. On the basis of contributions to science of his own original work, he was made a Fellow, 1877, of the Geological Society of London, England; the same year he graduated at Goettingen, Germany, with the degree of Ph. D. in Geology, Minerology and Paleontology. Returning to Canada, he filled for three years the position of science master in the Collegiate Institute, Hamilton, Ontario, which position he left for a professorship in King's University College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, the oldest and one of the most respectable colleges in Canada. It was from this professorship in King's University College, of which college he had also been made vice-president, that he came to the University of Missouri at the beginning of the present college year. It is proper that I should state that Dr. Spencer was chosen in preference to other and accomplished applicants mainly on the very favorable opinion of two men who, without exaggeration may safely be named as second to no scientist of our age—I refer to Dr. J. W. Dawson, of Montreal, Canada, and T. Sterry Hunt, LL. D., F. R. S., of Boston, Mass. A card to myself from Dr. Dawson, dated in July, 1882, runs thus:

"MY DEAR SIR—After some thought I have mentioned your vacancy to a young friend of mine, now professor of geology, etc., in King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, Dr. Spencer. He is a graduate of McGill and also of a German university, a rising man in geology, energetic and successful as a teacher," etc. Following up this suggestion, President Dawson afterwards gave Prof. Spencer the following letter for use before our Board of Curators:

McGILL UNIVERSITY,
MONTREAL, July 26, 1882. }

J. W. Spencer, B. A. Sc., Ph. D., Etc.:

MY DEAR SIR—I had the pleasure of recommending you for the appointment of science master in the Collegiate Institute of Hamilton, and as professor of chemistry and geology in King's College, Windsor, N. S., in both of which positions I have every reason to believe that you have acquitted yourself with credit. I would have anticipated this from your record in this university and abroad, and also from your success as an original investigator in geology. Learning that you are a candidate for another and more important academic position, I can only say that if your future work equals that of the past there will be no doubt that your appointment will be beneficial to the university in which you may be employed, and will vindicate the recommendation of your friends. You have my best wishes for success. Truly yours, [Signed] J. W. DAWSON.

Here is a similar letter from Dr. Hunt, who at the time of writing was at Montreal to attend the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at that place:

MONTREAL, August 1, 1882.

Dr. J. W. Spencer:

MY DEAR SIR—Learning that you are a candidate for a chair of geology and natural history in the University of Missouri, I am glad to say, from what you have done both in teaching and original investigation, I am persuaded that you will fill the post with honor to yourself and great usefulness to the university. But it would be of much advantage to the country that one who has been so successful a student of the geology of Ontario should be established as a teacher in the province. I am, my dear sir, with best wishes, very truly yours, (Signed) T. STERRY HUNT.

Other testimonials and expressions of commendation and regret from President Dart, of King's University, and others connected therewith, at losing his services, might be given, but it is superfluous to attempt to fortify the indorsements already submitted. I may add that the favorable opinions accompanying him here have been sustained by the impressions of his colleagues in science of our faculty.

Mr. Editor, science is cosmopolitan. Our Agassiz was from Switzerland; our Guinot is from France; our Engleman is from Germany: our Draper was from England, and Kont is from Canada. The enumeration might be greatly extended, and I respectfully submit that our young professor is not wisely nor justly obnoxious to taunts and criticism because he was, when chosen for work in Missouri on his indorsements, a loyal subject of her Britannic Majesty. It is a little curious that, in coming to the United States, he only comes back to the home of his ancestors, as he is a lineal descendant of a family that lived in one of our thirteen colonies and moved therefrom in the early pioneer days to Canada. But I should add that I cannot be mistaken in saying that he neither asks nor expects any favors, but desires only a fair understanding and honorable dealing. However, he has already given intimation of his withdrawal, and yet there may be good reason for reconsidering this before the year ends.

Allow me to assure you that Dr. Spencer is not a lily-fingered exquisite who disdains to soil his hands with hard work. Our furnaces have failed and the arrangements for heating with stoves are very inadequate for severely cold weather, and the curators have not had the means to provide suitable for the comfort and the convenience of the professors and students. Three men besides Prof. Spencer hear their classes in the same room. According to my information he has made a fair record among his colleagues as a stoker. I had been absent for some time when the demonstration occurred, and on returning and learning of the proceedings I had a twinkling of suspicion that the whole occurrence was a cruel practical joke. It seemed difficult otherwise to comprehend some of the points, as the Professor is a man who has the simplicity and gentleness of a child and the refined and cultivated manners of one well born and well bred, to the extent of my personal observation and experience and general information. Of course the surroundings are strange, but he is astounded at the interpretation put on his bearing, and especially as to the charge of plagiarism from Dana, in regard to which it is only necessary to say that Dana's Mineralogy, from which he is said to have plagiarized, was the text-book in the hands of the entire class. How could a man be guilty of plagiarism in using in any manner he saw fit and without notice, even, the language as well as the contents of the text book of the class in his efforts to aid the class in getting possession of the subject in hand? This is the most serious point in the statement, and the suggestion here made is in the interest of justice, and I am sure that every teacher who uses text books will appreciate its force. Facts, like air, are common property, and no man nor text book has a patent on them. I happen to know and might quote Prof. Dana's words to show that he has a high opinion of the young Professor; no doubt he would be amazed at this charge and deem it inconsiderate.

The fact is, Dr. Spencer has done a great deal of hard and dirty work since he has been here, in cleaning up and arranging to suit his own tastes in making useful to his classes the museum connected with his department, and has sometimes presented the appearance of a coal-heaver in the midst of the rubbish, dirt and dust. The energy and industry thus far displayed by him and in the interest of those he expected to teach show him to be as full of energy and hard work as an egg is full of meat. He is most devoted and enthusiastic, and if unconsciously too exacting of his pupils, that is a fault more easily remedied than its opposite.

I very much regret, Mr. Editor, the occasion of troubling you with this communication, but I shall be very much obliged for its publication. Prof. Spencer is absent, probably in St. Louis, where reside several distinguished gentlemen to whom he had letters of introduction. I have not seen him since my attention was arrested by the piece in your paper of the 18th, referred to (nor do I know whether he has seen it), and this communication is entirely without his knowledge. I confess a strong leaning toward bright, industrious and ambitious young men, and yield to no man in the frank and prompt personal and official recognition of merit, either in the young or in the old. Officially I know no favoritism, and am incapable of flattery, jealousy or censoriousness. I know only my work, and I defy the finger of criticism or of calumny to truthfully point to any abuse of my public trust in influencing appointments or removals in this institution of the State. The good of the university in all its departments and its widespread relations have been steadily and fearlessly pursued, and with most flattering success.

Without the slightest disparagement of others or of other days, whatever may be the outcome of the future, I will take the liberty of saying what I have good reason to know is true, and I feel proud of it, that altogether the present faculty of this university excels decidedly that at any preceding date in its history, and also that in intellect and scholarship and teaching power it is one of the very ablest faculties to be found in our country. The faculty places this institution in the front rank, the teaching facilities are low down in the second rank, and yet a liberal allowance of an adequate amount of money might at once lift our facilities to the front rank.

Allow me to close this communication with a quotation from my address, delivered July 5, 1876, in the chapel of the university, on the occasion of my inauguration as president of the university. The pertinence of the following language is very apparent:

"But the experience of my predecessors in this position for nearly forty years, some of whom have been men eminent for ability and active faithfulness and energy, forbids that I should entertain other than chastened anticipations of the future, however cloudless its sky may now appear to the public gaze, and it admonishes me not to be too sanguine of exemption from censure undeserved or from criticism as severe and unkind as it may be injudicious and unwise. * * * * With what artless simplicity we persuade ourselves that the storm may have exhausted itself and that the lightning may not strike again where it has so often struck, at least for the few years of a single administeation. How simple-minded is hope; how trusting and unsuspicous is the heartfelt desire of usefulness!

It is fully understood, however, that this is a public institution and a sacred trust of the entire State; no one of its departments is entitled to a toleration of incompetence, of inefficiency or of a lack of fidelity. Let the interests of the institution and of the cause of public education stand here above every other. The University is not for the Curators nor for the Faculty, but they are for it. It is the end aud all else is the means.

Yours respectfully," S. S. LAWS.

P. S. I have just received a brochure from the American Journal of Science, volume XXIV., December, 1882, article XLIV., Terraces and Beaches About Lake Ontario, by J. W. Spencer, B. A. Sc., Ph. D., F.G. S., State University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. (late vice-president of King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia), with plates VI. and VII. Read before the Montreal meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. I will mail it to you with this copy, and also state that Prof. Spencer will deliver a lecture, illustrated with maps and projections, in the chapel of the University, Wednesday morning, 9 to 10, January 10, 1883, on the Origin and Geological History of the Mississippi River. Certainly this is a subject of unquestionable interest to our Missouri scientists. On Thursday morning, at the same honr, J. W. Sanborn, our Professor of Agriculture, who stands in the front rank of those in his line, will deliver a lecture, in the same place, especially intended for the farmers of Missouri. The reason of these lectures being arranged for the times indicated is that the Board of Curators assemble for their regular semi-annual meeting the second Tuesday of January, and this will be their first meeting since the appointment of these professors to their present positions in the Missouri University. We would be greatly pleased to see citizens from all parts of the State in attendance. L.

MR. H. C. CHURCHILL, druggist, Windsor, Henry county, Mo., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has given good satisfaction."

Brick Better than Iron.

From Gath's New York Letters.

An architect here, speaking of building material, says: "Under the rational order of things it will survive centuries without showing its age; but an iron structure, under the best care, will begin to show the weight of years by the close of its first century. The iron age has gone by in New York. Ten years ago it was at its height, as witness the blocks of iron buildings in Mercer and Greene streets and below Canal street. It was all iron then. History is being repeated. Now we are going back to first principles. The first buildings of any importance that were constructed on Manhattan Island were of brick, brought from Holland for the purpose. You know what they made by the old Washington Hotel and the old Dutch church, so lately demolished when they were well into their second century. The brick in them was like flint, growing harder with age, and the mortar was cemented to it."

THE SULTAN'S INSANITY.

Some Curious Manifestations of the Malady.

Constantinople Cor. of the New York Sun.

Fuad Pasha and Nedjib Pasha were driving out to Pera the other day to spend the evening at the residence of Madame Jourdan, the wife of the Minister to Portugal, who had prepared a banquet in their honor. They were only a few moments from their destination when a Lieutenant-Colonel, aide-de-camp of the Sultan, stopped their carriage and told Fuad that the Sultan wished to see him upon important and pressing business. Nedjib naturally got out and Fuad drove back toward Yidiz. On arriving at the palace he found everything in confusion. The Sultan, in despair, was crying out: "I am a ruined man! Bring me my children! I must fly! Quick! quick! The first and second army corps (Constantinople and Adrianopie) are against me! And the ministers also! All of you want to put me to death!" And, as a matter of fact, the imperial yacht was under steam and her launches at the foot of the palace. Fuad was immediately searched and disarmed. He was astounded. Nevertheless, his examination was begun on the spot. It was conducted by Mahmoud Nedim, Minister of the Interior, and Djevdet, Minister of Justice, Dervish Pasha and the Sultan were also present. Fuad, having composed himself, said that the palace was neither a court of justice nor a court martial; that if he was accused of anything, the law provided for the case and designated councils of war for the trial of Marshals; and, finally, that in any case he would refuse absolutely to make any answers in the presence of Dervish Pasha. The Sultan ordered the latter to retire. The complaint of Mehemet Pasha was then read to Fuad, the substance of which I gave you in a former letter, and which, in a word, charged Fuad with being in a conspiracy of the army and the Ministers to depose the Sultan. And Mehemet addedthat the revelation was made to him by the accused in a conversation which lasted three hours with him and his two cousins; that the other Mehemet Pasha, the son of Shamyl, was also present.

Fuad, in his defense, commenced by saying that these three men, relatives and accomplices, constituted, in his eyes, a single accuser, and that consequently neither one of them could be regarded as a witness in support of the charge. Then he had little trouble in showing up the absurdity of the story. The Sultan grasped his hand, threw his arms around him, and cried out: "I knew well that you were my faithful servant! It is these hounds that have done all this to frighten me and to get my money!" And thereupon he had them all arrested, Fuad along with the rest. Then he gave the order upon the spot for the dismissal of the Circassians, and turned out the Ministry.

You know the rest.

Fuad has just been set free. The Colonel who arrested him, or at least brought him to the palace, was promoted and received the cross of the Commander of the Medjidie and 500 Turkish pounds. If Fuad had set out for that dinner party ten minutes sooner, the Sultan would have embarked for Europe with his children, and the Empire would have had another government.

As a matter of fact, Fuad had gone from his house without telling where he was going. All that was known of his movements was that he had started in the direction of Pera, and it was by the merest accident that the aide-de-camp overtook him.

GIRLS IN WHITE GOWNS.

What Fine Eyes and Nature's Own Tresses Must Do for Debutantes.

New York Letter in the Washington Star.

A debutante always wears white, and there is a fashion now of making the dresses for the first season with the utmost simplicity, so that they look as much like the robes for a confirmation as for entrance into the world of gayety. India muslin this year has been the favorite fabric, and its ornamentation is confined to the silken belt or sash, lace, and the mass of roses at the waist. Very little jewelry is worn—sometimes none at all—and the high lights, if any, come from the eyes, the hair, the cheeks, and the red, red lips of the bright young face. In such sweet simplicity of dress the "chromo" girls, as they are called, have decidedly the best of it. The blue eyes, the golden hair and the natural red which might become florid under harsher circumstances have it all their own way. It is only when costume is suitably adapted to individuality that the type appears to the best advantage.

Where there are older sisters who are already experienced from having had the advantage of several seasons' training, they assist in doing the honors, but it is not etiquette for them to wear white. They may wear pink or blue, or pale green, or a colored satin coat with a white skirt, but they must not wear all white. Indeed, all white, unless it is very rich, has a significance which limits its functions. It may be worn as a morning dress at home, but abroad it denotes a bride, a debutante or a candidate for confirmation. Very rich and very original white dresses are of course an exception to this rule.

Royal and Ministerial Salaries.

From the London Truth.

In 1871 Sir Charles Dilke stated that the cost of royalty was excessive, and he estimated it at £1,000,000 per annum. He was not far wrong, as was conclusively proved when an additional grant was asked for Prince Leopold on the occasion of his marriage. But it by no means follows necessarily that Sir Charles wishes to disestablish royalty because he is in favor of partially disendowing it. In a country where the Prime Minister receives £5,000 per annum and an agricultural laborer about 18s. per week, it is conceivable that the sovereign might be respected with a yearly income of £50,000 per annum, and that each of her children might maintain themselves in perfect comfort on £4,000 per annum. In the days of Charles II. the post of Prime Minister was worth about £100,000 per annum. I do not imagine that the respect for the incumbent of this post has dimnished because the salary attached to it is only one-twentieth of that sum.

Costly Revenge.

From the Salt Lake Tribune.

A Bannock Indian boy, about 12 years of age, met with a horrible death at the flouring mill at Fort Hall Indian Agency, I. T., on last Tuesday. The boy was idling around the mill at the time, and happened to get in the machinery, and was badly crushed and mangled before he could be taken from the gearing. He died soon afterward. It is custom of Indians to burn or destroy all things connected with the death of one of the their tribe. For instance, if one meets death by being kicked by a horse, the animal is killed; and if from disease an Indian dies in a wickiup or lodge it is burned. The mill in which this accident occurred was built by the Government at a cost of $7,000 or $8,000, and was worth that amount of money. Between 6 and 7 o'clock on the morning of the 6th this mill was discovered to be on fire, and was soon entirely consumed, with a large amount of wheat and flour belonging to the Indians. The grain and flour was worth from $2,000 to $3,000.

Wool Growing on a Sheep's Eyeball.

From the Chicago Times.

There is a ewe sheep at Plainwell that runs to wool in a remarkable manner. Not only is its pelt covered with wool, but it grows a tuft on one of its eyeballs that has to be clipped frequently to give it a chance to see. The abnormal growth is on the white of the ball, leaving the iris unobstructed.

Real Fun in a Kentucky Town.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Over 2,000 shots were fired by drunken roughs at Elizabethtown Christmas night, and many fine plate-glass fronts were riddled by bullets. Swinging signs were transformed into sieves, and many people narrowly escaped being struck by the [illegible] fired bullets.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting, perhaps, from a trifling and unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proved its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL, a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

TEN YEARS.

Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

I have delayed thus long in writing because I wanted to make "assurance doubly sure" in the trial of S. S. S. in my own case, and am happy to report that it has entirely eradicated every symptom of the disease from my system. Had followed the advice of Tom Swift it would have saved me ten years of intense suffering. I have not felt the least return of the disease, and can fully and truly recommend S. S. S. to all suffering from the scourge, and especially to the physicians in Macon, who knew my condition. When I can positively assure them that it has not only relieved me of pain, but has entirely obliterated every trace of the disease from my system, it ought to convince even them of its infallible qualities. I do not wish my name published, but you can show my letter to those who formerly knew of my condition. It is a shame human kind should suffer from the prejudice of physicians to anything not laid down in the text-books.

DEAD.

Engineer McCort Dies of His Injuries—The Switchman Arrested.

Jas. McCort, the engineer of engine No. 105, who met with the accident yesterday morning in the Missouri Pacific freight yards, and was carried home in an insensible condition, died last evening about 5 o'clock from the effects of his injuries. Sergt. John Burke, as soon as he heard of the death, arrested the switchman, James Keely, who turned the switch and motioned McCort in. Keely was found at his boarding place 340 Jefferson avenue, and seemed very much surprised that any blame was attached to him, as he considered he had done nothing but what his duty as switchman required. His version of the affair is that McCort, having just brought in a train, was returning on one of the main tracks, the same track on which another train was running faster than usual to make eastern connections at the depot. Nevertheless, the switchman opened the switch to a side track and motioned McCort in. Keely says he had no idea but that the engine had plenty of time to get in, and the switch be closed before the incoming train arrived.

McCort was one of the oldest engineers on the road. He has been following his trade here in St. Louis for nearly twenty years, and in that time, although he was considered a very cautious and careful man, met with a number of accidents. Six times has he been taken home unconscious from the effects of accidents, and his had almost became a charmed life from his narrow escapes from death, but yesterday's accident did the work only too well.

The accident and its causes are being investigated by the railroad company, and the switchman will receive a hearing in a few days.

SPORTING SUNDRIES.

Unsatisfactory Gunning Season—Mace's Half-Breed Maori—Prize Ring Gossip.

Mr. J. B. C. Lucas and Dr. Chas. Michel, two prominent members of the St. Louis Gun Club, have just returned from a short hunting trip to Carthage, Mo. They shot several bags of quail, and say they could have killed hundreds of rabbits had they been so disposed. In response to a question this morning, Mr. Albright, the secretary of the St. Louis Gun Club, said "the season's sport in this section, compared with that of last season, had been very unsatisfactory to the gunners. In the first place, the period for shooting ducks, which at the beginning was very promising, was ruined by the unfavorable weather, the cold snap in November having driven all the birds south before the sportsmen could get a chance at them. Rabbits have been reported in abundance throughout the State, but these are not considered game by the gentlemen sportsmen, and are not even protected by the game laws of the State." "The quail season, which closes in this State on the first of next month, and which practically closes the hunting season, should have been a good one, but for some reason very few birds have been shot."

"The local sportsmen have made frequent trips to Minnesota, Iowa and other states of the northwest, where game is abundant, but toward the end of the season they have settled down and given it up." Messrs. H. C. Pierce and Dabney Carr have determined to take advantage of the one month left of the season. These gentlemen, accompanied by Mr. Pierce's father, from New York State, will leave this evening for Galveston, Texas, for a few weeks' sport. Mr. Pierce recently returned from a three days' hunt in this section, having in that time shot 120 snipe, 100 duck and 60 quail.

THE PRIZE RING.

Mr. Richard K. Fox has received a letter from Charles E. Davis, of Chicago, in which he says: "I notice that to-day's papers say that Jem Mace and his unknown, 'Slade,' intend stopping in Chicago on their way East. Will you tell Mace to drop in and see me? John Sullivan has made a verbal contract with me to go under my management. Jere Dunne, who was to look after Sullivan's interests in the Chicago affair, has nothing to do with him for some reason. I hear Mace has sparred with his pupil, Slade, in Australia, on his travels, and says of him that, in his opinion, he is a good man to fight Sullivan with the bare knuckles. I want the public to know that Sullivan expresses his readiness to accommodate either for from $5,000 to $10,000 a side.

Mike Cleary, the well known Philadelphia boxer, has offered Pat Scallion, the noted heavy-weight boxer of Trenton, N. J., $100 to spar with him four rounds of three minutes each, with one minute resting time. Scallion has accepted the proposition and the meeting has been arranged to take place January 8.

John L. Sullivan and Mike Cleary will take a benefit in Philadelphia January 15. The beneficiaries will wind up with a four-round glove contest. Joe Coburn is also expected to be on hand.

A correspondent furnishes the following description of Slade, the half-breed Maori, who was brought to this country by Jem Mace to fight Sullivan: "He is is six feet and a half in his bare feet, with enormous shoulders and a depth of chest perfectly astounding, with arms like railroad ties, small wrists and large, powerful hands, with enormous knuckles. His appearance wac one calculated to awe and astonish a man of ordinary size. Jem Mace is no boy in size, and possesses a wonderful development of neck, chest and shoulders; but beside Slade he is quite small, and Patsy Hogan, who is a light-weight, appeared to be a mere infant. Slade's legs are perfectly formed, and his feet and ankles are small. Every move he made was graceful, His carriage was dignified and manly, and his face wore a rather grave, though pleasant expression, reminding one very much of the old English champion, Tom Cribb." Mace says he is a wonderful wrestler, and threw Miller, the well known professional, as he would a baby. He can outjump any man his size, is as active as a cat and is the hardest hitter he ever saw in his life. He has whipped every man that ever crossed him.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Local Freight Agents' Association—Appointments—The Narrow Gauge.

The Southwestern system brought in 2,153 bales of cotton yesterday.

The Iron Mountain brought in 1,639 bales of cotton yesterday and the Missouri Pacific 756.

Chas. Howard, of Boston, Mass., was yesterday appointed receiver of the Danville, Olney and Ohio River Railway, with a bond of $25,000.

Mr. J. M. Culp, general freight agent of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and Lee Howell, Division G. F. A., came in from Louisville this morning.

Mr. Sumner Hopkins, heretofore Northwestern Freight and Passenger Agent of the Mobile and Ohio Railway, has been appointed General Northwestern Agent with headquarters at Chicago.

R. H. Fowler has been appointed southern passenger agent of the Chicago and Alton at Louisville, Ky., in the place formerly occupied by Charles F. Ludlow, now passenger agent for the the K. C., L. & S. K.

Mr. Morris Hopkins has been appointed agent of the M. & O. railroad at St. Louis, under Sumner Hopkins, the general Northern agent in place of Mr. W. W. Cox, who has been forced to retire from active business because of continued ill health.

The office of chief engineer having been abolished by the St. L., K. & N. W. and the C. B. & K. C. roads, the following appointments to cover the duties of that office have been made: W. H. Bartlett, master mechanic; S. F. Clapp, superintendent of the bridge and building departments, vice Mr. G. Gibson, resigned; C. W. Stevens, in charge of St. L., K. & N. W., Keokuk to St. Peters, as roadmaster; H. H. Libbe, chief train dispatcher.

The cotton receipts for the Cairo Short Line for the month of November were 505, and for December 2,016. This is a very good showing for a road not running through a cotton country, but depending upon connections for this class of freight, and this in the face of great trunk lines that tap the entire cotton region from all sides. The estimate made of next season's receipts, when the "Paramore" Line is completed, is as high as 200,000 bales and the more enthusiastic ones place it as high as 350,000 bales. When it is known that the Paramore Line, with which the Cairo Shore Line has made arrangements to haul all its freight from Cairo to St. Louis for fifty years, runs through an almost exclusively cotton region, single counties of which produce 40,000 bales apiece, a slight estimate of the cotton that the two lines named will bring into this can be made, and the figures given above do not seem so imaginary.

The Local Freight Agents' Association of St. Louis is something that the public knows very little about. The objects of the association are of very great importance to commercial interests of St. Louis. The Local Freight Agents' Association is really to the railroad's side of the question what the Freight Bureau is to the shipper, and if the latter will be productive of good the former must be. The association comprises all the local freight agents of St. Louis and East St. Louis, and representatives of each of the Terry Car Transfer Companies, about twenty members in all. There is a regular organization, with the usual officers. W. G. Broughton, of the St. L. B. and T. Co., is president; J. J. Baulch, of the St. L. B. and T. Co., is secretary; J. A. Manton, agent of the 'Frisco, is treasurer; J. T. Burch, agent of the Missouri Pacific, J. J. O'Connor, agent of the St. L., I. M. & S., and J. G. Creveling, agent of the Vandalia, constitute the Executive Committe. The association meets on the first and third Mondays of each month in the reading-room of the Merchants's Exchange. The objects of the Association are two-fold. Besides bringing together all the local agents and acquainting each with the other, it is productive of much good in the way of reducing and making uniform the charges for switching, etc., and tends to conciliate and expedite the freight business of the city. An organization of this kind was attempted some time during last October, but the first effort, although not a complete failure was not a success, and the present organization was not effected until during last November. Prior to the formation of the association many of the local agents, although they had been here in the city for years, had never met each other, were not personally acquainted. There was no mutual understanding of any kind between these representatives of identical and reciprocally dependent interests. The result was that frequently the best of business friendship did not exist between these champions of rival lines and harmony did not always prevail. The object of this association is to do away with all these unnecessary drawbacks in the interchange of business, and it has been successful so far.

Col. Paramore, president of the I. & St. L., Mr. George Ristine, general manager, and several other parties interested in the great narrow-gauge road, leave Saturday night for a tour of inspection over the line, and will spend some time in inspecting that portion of the road already built and that now in process of building. There are now but two gaps, of an aggregate length of sixty miles, in the line as graded between Cairo and Gatesville, Tex., a distance of nearly 800 miles. The gap of forty-four miles between Pine Bluff, Ark., and Clarendon, Ark., is all graded, the bridge across the Arkansas River, a Combination Howe Truss which cost $50,000, the draw-span being entirely of iron, is now completed, and the track, thirty-five pound steel rail, is being laid on it. The long trestle on the other side of the river is about finished, and will be done as soon as the track-layers reach it, and the entire gap will be iron girt within thirty days, the holidays having delayed the work at least two weeks. The other gap, one of sixteen miles, just this side of the Red River, is all graded and the track being laid at the rate of one and one-fourth miles per day. The bridge across the Red River is not quite done yet, but will be finished by the time the Clarendon gap is finished. So that forty days hence will see the Texas and St. Louis finished, which means "ready for business," as all the motive power, rolling stock and everything else has been provided and on the ground ready for work, and as soon as the track is laid the road will be a fully matured line. Mr. Ristine, the recently appointed general manager, makes the trip to become more thoroughly acquainted with the road and more fully organize the working forces he has to deal with. A change or reorganization in the Board of directors, is spoken of, and some arrangement will be attempted whereby the two separate organizations, the T. & St. L. in Texas and the T. & St. L. in Arkansas and Missouri, made necessary by the State laws of Texas, may be done away with and the business of the entire road done as if by one company. This move will likely be made during the party's absence.

Robbed on the Train.

A pretty lively commotion was caused upon the incoming Iron Mountain train as it neared the city this morning by the discovery that one of the passengers of the Pullman, Mr. P. H. Hennessy, of Galveston, Tex., had been robbed of $260. The money was stolen from his vest pocket while he was taking his morning toilet in the wash-room, and, as there was no clue as to how or by whom the robbery had been committed, Mr. Hennessy was obliged to bear his loss without a murmur. A fellow-passenger of Mr. Hennessy, alluding to the affair in conversation with a POST-DISPATCH reporter this morning, said that apart from the serious nature of Mr. Hennessy's loss, a very disagreeable feature connected with the case was the fact that every other passenger in the car was made decidedly uncomfortable by the unavoidable fear that he might be suspected of the crime. The opinion was freely expressed on the car that the risk run by passengers having money in their possession was unnecessarily great, and that each car should be provided with a strong-box in which their money might be taken care of by the company, the relation between it and the passengers to be such as exist between a hotel-keeper and his guests.

COMFORT!

It is real nice to be comfortable—a contented spirit brings comfort—so does a well-filled pocket-book; so does a cheerful fireside, and this may be found in the humble cottage as well as the lordly palace.

It's real nice to go home after a day of vexatious business cares and find the tea kittle singing merrily in front of the hearth, have mother or wife divest you of your overcoat, tread on the cat's tail by accident, kiss the baby (if you have one), and make yourself generally cheerful and sunshiny. And then when you are settled down comfortably into your easy-chair, dressing-gown and slippers, with the day's paper well in hand, you feel as rich as Jay Gould—for he can't enjoy any more than this with all his millions—so try and cultivate a contented spirit. If you can't drive to the opera in a carriage take a street car; if you can't have turkey for dinner try a good roast. Keep your heart warm with kind feelings—and—and—trade this year at FAMOUS. You know what we keep for sale, and past experience has taught you that we undersell all competition. You will find us at

DRAWN FROM THE DOCKETS.

Leading Features of the Business in the Four Courts To-Day.

Judges Adams and Barday are devoting their attention to-day to the law docket, the first call with the new judge of Court No. 3. Mr. Charles F. Joy, in the damage case of Barklow against the St. Louis Railroad Company, Fifth Street line, presented a motion for default against the company on the ground that there had been no pleading. It was a case of running over a child, and the plaintiff in the first place moved to sue as a poor person. This was overruled, and the company entered a motion for security for costs, which was confessed, and time granted the plaintiff to give security. The time has not elapsed. The railroad company has entered no other motion and in the absence of any pleading Mr. Jay contended that he was entitled to default. It is a peculiar question.

Before Judge Adams, Mr. Lewis, nephew of Gen. Henderson, presented a motion in the divorce case of Hercules McCord against Mary Alice McCord, to suppress depositions. The story of this domestic trouble has been published throughout the country. It involved charges on the part of the husband, that his wife had eloped while on a visit to her mother at Pittsburg, and the depositions developed testimony relative to a flirtation on the "Bristol." Mrs. McCord raises the point that no notice was given her of the taking of depositions in support of her husband's case, and that at the time the court had not made any provision for her to obtain counsel in defense.

Judge Horner's court is not in session to-day. To-morrow the Hammond ejectment case will be taken up in that room.

Judge Lubke is sitting to-day in the case of Dyas against Hanson, which is tried before a special jury. The particulars of this case have already been published in these colums. It involves a claim on an account, and a feature of the defense is that a draft on the Yeager Milling Company was sent on but the draft was not presented in due course and a fire occurred at the mill which altered the situation. The defendant raises the question whether he can be held responsible for negligence in presenting the draft.

WITHOUT A DIPLOMA.

Dr. Hostetter Fined Twenty-five Dollars This Morning.

Dr. Peter Hostetter was fined $25 in the Second District Police Court this morning for practicing in St. Louis without being registered. Dr. Wm. Bauer, of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, Eleventh and North Market streets, was in attendance, and said that he was acquainted with Dr. Hostetter, and asked that the court be as light as possible in the way of a fine. Judge Denison asked the Prosecuting Attorney, Mr. Tracy, if he had any objections to the fine being remitted. Mr. Tracy replied that he had not, seeing that the authorities did not show any anxiety to prosecute the defendant, and it was finally decided to let the doctor off on the payment of costs. It will be remembered that Dr. Hostetter gave a prescription last Wednesday to Mrs. Mollie Pratt, who was suffering from a cold and other sickness. Shortly after she had taken a dose of the medicine prescribed by Dr. Hostetter she died, and the police, hearing of the matter, arrested Dr. Hostetter, but there has been no evidence whatever to show that her death was caused by any prescription of medicine furnished by Dr. Hostetter.

Death of Major De Gress.

A telegram from the City of Mexico announces the death of Major Frank De Gress, of the firm of Wexel and De Gress, the vice-president and agent of Gould's Oriental and Interoceanic Railroad. Major De Gress formerly lived in St. Louis, but twenty years ago he made his way to the City of Mexico with a small stock of revolvers and arms, out of which has grown one of the great firms of Mexico. For a number of years the firm of Wexel & De Gress have had control of the arms business of that country, both for the Government and for private trade, and their fortune was estimated up in the millions. De Gress was one of the prominent features of Mexico, where he was immensely popular. He was the first president of the American Club there and was equally esteemed by Mexicans and Americans, and, although he had accomplished much, was still a young man.

It is ordered that said defendants be notified that a civil action has been commenced against them, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a judgment and decree declaring a certain paper writing purporting to be the last will and testament of one Daniel Keleher, now deceased, null and void, and not to be the last will and testament of said Daniel Keleher, on the grounds that said Daniel Keleher, in his lifetime, was induced to make, execute and publish said pretended will by and through the fraud, misrepresentations, fraudulent scheming, fraudulent contrivance, fraudulent connivance and undue influence of the defendants and other persons, that said pretended will was made and executed under a delusion, misapprehension, misconception and mistake of said Daniel Keleher, deceased, in relation to his heirs and the number, names and residences of them; that said pretended will was neither drawn nor dictated by the said Daniel Keleher, deceased; that the same was not executed or made freely by the said Daniel Keleher, deceased, but was made and executed by him under an improper and undue constraint and under the improper and undue influence of the defendants and others in collusion with them.

And unless they appear at the term of this court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis on the first Monday of February next, and on or before the third day thereof answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against them as confessed.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.
